THE OLD FRONT DOOR. I remember the time when I used to sit, A happy and thoughtless boy, When father came home from his work at last, And I was tired of my toy; I remember the time, and none more sweet Shall I know forevermore, When I sat at the eye by my mother's side, On the sill of the old front door.

The Two Dawns. I was completely worn out, and over-worked, the doctor said, and decided to take much needed vacation. I glanced around with a disheartened air, at the articles of vertu I had prized so highly, many of which had cost me more than one meal, thinking how stupid I had been working and starving myself miserably to gratify an absurd fancy for rare bits of china and costly old books.

mercantile pursuits are so widely divergent that it would be difficult for me to truly sympathize with you," he said, thoughtfully; "yet we all have our ambitions dreams—some of fame, some of riches—and I have often thought there is more enjoyment in anticipating the fulfillment of them than in their actual consummation. When I was crambled by it, it seemed as if I would reach the very pinnacle of success could I but obtain a clerk's position and so on through each grade. My ambition is still aspiring and happy as ever, so much—farther off than it was fifteen years ago. This dear old home is the only spot where I can find peace, if not forgiveness," he concluded, as we stopped before the low, vine-covered porch, where his mother, a sweet-faced old lady was waiting to greet us. I may say, for her welcome of me was very cordial.

In my situation that subject is out of the question," said Chief Justice Waite to a Chicago reporter the other day. GLADSTONE—A nephew of Gladstone was asked in New York the other day if the rumor of the premier's retirement at the end of the present session was likely to be realized? "To this I can answer emphatically, no; my uncle, although full of work, is still hale and hearty, and as full of vigor as ever; his mind is as active as in his prime days. He intends to serve his country as long as he is able, and hopes to die in harness. He will be in recreation, labor a pastime." LAMAR—Senator Lamar's mode of life is simple. He has generally a large suite of rooms, strewed with books and papers. He lives alone. He eats when he is hungry, and at the nearest hotel or restaurant wherever he may happen to be. He used to have his wife with him, but now, poor lady, she has become a hopeless invalid through much sorrow from domestic griefs. Lamar is as careless as a child in money matters. He never knows how much he has, and often pays the same bill twice to dishonest tradesmen.

THE YOUNG MAN WHO SHOWED OFF. The other day a young man about twenty years of age, accompanied by a girl two or three years younger, reached the city by a Bay City train, and after looking around for a few hours returned to the depot and bought some sandwiches for lunch. The fellow was heard bragging a good deal as to what he had done and could do and cities he had visited, and by he walked up to the depot policeman and handed him four five-cent cigars and said: "That's my girl in there." "Yes." "She just thinks her eyes of me." "So?" "I've never had a chance to show her how I'd like to see her, and it seems to me we might put up a little job right here." "How?" "Well, suppose we had her walk out to see the river, I leave her for a moment. Some chap comes along and begins to chat her up. I run up and knock him into the middle of next week. She'd want to marry me within a week. Girls of her age just die on here, you know!" "Yes, they do." "With you to help me. You pick out some chap around here and tell him what I'm up to and I won't mind standing treat for all hands. When I run in on him to look for it." Five minutes later the girl stood on the wharf alone. A fellow big enough to pilot a boat of 500 over a freight car approached in a careless way and observed: "Fino day, miss?" "Yes, sir." "Now you of the Canada shore?" "Yes, indeed." "May I offer you some peppermint?" "I'd rather the young man come rushing down. When he comes within ten feet of the girl he cried out: "You're your father's daughter, you're your father's daughter!" "Oh, I guess not," earnestly replied the girl. "But, I guess not," earnestly replied the girl. "But, I guess not," earnestly replied the girl. "But, I guess not," earnestly replied the girl.
