

H. V. WORTHINGTON, EDITOR. LEHIGHTON, PA. SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1883.

COUNTY MEETING. The annual Democratic County Meeting will be held at the Court House in the Borough of Mauch Chunk on Monday, August 20th, 1883, at one o'clock p. m. It will be the duty of this meeting to name persons to hold the Delegate Elections, in the town of holding the county nominating convention and select a county committee for the ensuing campaign, and transact any other business upon which it has power to act.

Editorial Mention.

New York City is starting a "corner" in poisons. Mrs. Langtry has returned to England, but she says that "Pleasant God, I'll soon come back again."

A woman editor remarks that if such an extravagant amount of virtue were bestowed upon the dead, there would be no more dividends among the living.

Church picnic after dark are to come to an end in the diocese of the bishop of Newark. It would be well if all camp-meetings were to be "blown off" at sunset.

The legislature will pass the Republican appropriation bill, it won't pass the Democratic bill and it won't adjourn. Perhaps it would go out and take a drink.

Two of our learned contemporaries at Mauch Chunk are holding liberal elections at each other which may, we hope, prepare both for proper entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Her "Brazils" are heaping coals of fire upon the Harvard portents who refused him a few useless letters of the alphabet. Last week he subscribed $5000 dollars for a new dormitory in Williams College.

And the English colonies and dependencies to be formed into a federal union like the United States? This is the greatest question at present before the British Government. Ireland and Canada form the most difficult part of the problem.

"It is wonderful," said a celebrated Frenchman, "with how much fortitude we can bear the misfortune of other people." How many Pennsylvania people will weep upon hearing that in a bank at Binghamton, N. Y., there are now eighty-nine cents on the dollar?

The Philadelphia base ball club has suffered from a stroke, but is now "recovering" from a stroke of good luck. In the last fourteen games, Gross, the sinner batter, has been fifty-nine times at the bat, and made 29 safe hits, including nine two-baggers and four three baggers, running up an average of .491.

Among the American rifle team, at present competing in London, was well ahead on Friday evening, the scoring of Saturday showing in favor of the English marksmen. The sum total of the scoring, at ranges varying from two hundred to a thousand yards, was, for the English 1057 points, for the Americans 1906.

The Adventists of Massachusetts are building an ark of enormous proportions to provide against the second deluge which they believe to be coming soon. For twenty dollars shelter will be afforded fifty dollars will be the price of a nicely furnished room. Provisions can be made for beasts, stables being furnished at fixed rates.

Mr. Sec'y FOLGER, in a letter to a correspondent, has just stated that he has no power to order the receipt of the trade dollar at the Treasury in the same way as the standard silver dollars. He also quotes the joint resolution of Congress, approved July 22, 1876, providing as follows: "That the Trade Dollar shall not hereafter be a legal tender."

The Scranton Republicans, apropos of being forbidden in church, drops into poetry: "There was a little girl, and she had a little cur." And when she was good, she was very good. And when she was bad she was horrid."

CHERRY has been badly beaten in pitched battle by some person with the suggestive name of Usher. An immense number of "Cet's" men were killed, but that don't matter as the noble warrior himself still possesses the gold-headed cane presented by the Prince of Wales, and a stove pipe hat that he bought in London to cover his nakedness.

Mr. BLAINE'S book, "Recollections of Twenty Years in Congress," will be published in October. The ex-Secretary "knows a thing or two" about high political life in Washington if he wishes to give them away. But the plumed knight is wiser than Dorey and he will keep carefully out of two hands, volumes exactly that information which the public would "give their ears to hear."

A CORRESPONDENT thus refers to the manner in which legislation proceeds at Harrisburg during the present session: "On Monday night, Senator Boggs, after coddling his simple brain, prepared a resolution pledging the Senate against the further prosecuting of the Senate for revenue only," but he quickly relented, and the Senate last, heard prayer and adjourned with nothing accomplished except the reading of the journal."

HERALD: We may not be descended from monkeys after all. A recent meeting of the London Anthropological Society it was decided that "as yet no scientific evidence had been met with giving countenance to the theory that man had evolved from a lower order of animals." It was also intimated that if Herbert Spencer had been more careful about his facts he would never have arrived at his theory. It seems hard that a "line should be sharply drawn" at monkeys to prevent them eternally from entering the legislature or the higher professions.

PRESENER TACK is distributing the prize to the successful marksmen at Wimbledon this year. Last Saturday she shook hands with all the members of the American team and wished them success in future contests. It is a strange occurrence upon the ways of the world that in another column of the same newspaper which reports the rifle proceedings we find that the pictures, furniture and bric-a-brac of Prince Tack are for sale by public auction. The object is such a plebeian one as to pay the debts of the Prince and Princess.

A TRAVELER'S statistician has amused himself calculating the distance traveled in a year by the hand of a printer. He takes the principle that a skillful compositor, working ten hours a day, allowing for distributing and correcting, sets up 12,000 letters. In counting the year at 300 working days, he makes them a total of 3,600,000 letters. Consequently the distance from the case to the stick and from the stick to the case being estimated at two feet, makes in all 7,200,000 feet, there being 23,500 feet in a geographical mile, so that the distance made in a year under these conditions by a printer's hand is in the neighborhood of 300 miles, or a mile a day.

His some beautiful language on the simple matter of petroleum oil. Dr. J. P. Newman, of New York, shows that Pennsylvania is "the Light of the World" in the following words: "American petroleum at the present time lights up the traditional Garden of Eden, the ruins of Babylon, the mosques of Bagdad, the city of 'A Thousand and One Nights.' It shines upon the exhumed palace of Sennacherib, on the tomb of Josiah in Nineveh, and upon the birth-place of Job and Abraham. It illuminates the church of the Nativity in Bethlehem, the Church of the Sepulchre in Jerusalem, and the Church of the Ascension on the Mount of Olives. It burns around the Pyramids of Egypt, on the plains of ancient Troy, on the Acropolis of Athens, and in the chief sources of illumination in cottage and palace on the banks of the Golden Horn." And yet Henry Waterston says: "Let Pennsylvania go to the bank!"

SOME weeks ago the English Government made an agreement with M. de Lesseps by which that gentleman was authorized to construct another Suez canal, England advancing $60,000,000 at 3% per cent, to be paid off in fifty years. English ship-owners, general merchants, the public at large and the London Times got frightened at the idea of France being so intimately associated with English interests in the East. France was brought to bear upon Mr. Gladstone to back out of the contract, which that statesman has accordingly done. De Lesseps, however will carry out his project with characteristic courage and persistence. He will raise the money in France alone, if necessary, and will build his canal, with no thanks to England or anybody else except to his "own beloved France."

BALTIMORE is draped in mourning for "those who never shall return." On Monday night that city, in which during recent years many eventful scenes have transpired, was driven to a paroxysm of terror and despair by the news of a catastrophe which had befallen the city. At 9 o'clock in the evening, about two hundred people, the best detachment of a police party, were assembled at the end of the North Point Wharf preparing to return home on board the steamer "Cockney City." Suddenly the wharf broke down. Nearly all of the two hundred people were hurled into the water. The distance from the wharf is only nine hundred feet, but in the terror and confusion that prevailed sixty-five lives were lost, and no hopes are entertained for the recovery of many who were taken to shore. Most of the victims were women, and in nearly every case young girls in the flush of maidenhood.

IT REMEMBERS most probable at present that cholera will be more successful than Arabi Pasha in driving the English troops out of Egypt. The pestilence has broken out in the 42nd Regiment, that famous "Black Watch," whose exploits have been associated with the success of British armies in every quarter of the globe. Distinguished medical men are on the way to the district, from India, France and England. But it is some consolation to know that those who are best qualified to speak upon the subject say the disease is one of annual occurrence in the east and that stringent quarantine laws will effectually restrict its ravages to those districts where it now prevails.

CAPTAIN MATTHEW WEEK, the famous English swimmer, has taken his last dive. On Tuesday afternoon he attempted to swim the Niagara whirlpool rapids. At precisely two minutes past four o'clock he sprang from his boat, about a third of a mile above the railroad suspension bridge and close to the old "Maid of the Mill" landing. Contrary to the rumor that he was to make the attempt in an India rubber ball, the lander and or was cutly naked, save a handkerchief for protection of his stomach. As he came to the whirlpool he was seen to throw up one of his arms, whether a sign of strength or of distress cannot be known. Nothing was seen of him afterwards, although the search was continued until long after dark: In 1875 William Adams, the English champion from Dover to Calais, and has since been performing wonderful feats of strength and daring in England and America. He leaves a widow and two children in Shropshire, England.

THERE is a skeleton in every family and some weak spot in every man. The immortal Jay Gould can be compared by his own leading characteristic—avarice. A young woman went to call a book to Jay Gould. She hid it under her cloak and seemed mysterious. "No one but Mr. Gould would do," she told the messenger. Mr. Gould was not in. She would come again. She kept on calling daily until, in despair, the messenger informed Mr. Gould, who had her shown in. "I suppose, Mr. Gould," said she, "when you know my business you will kill me. I am selling books." But after some persuasion he purchased a volume, and gave her a list of names of his friends to whom he thought she could sell. Russell Sage was the only one with whom she was not successful.

Two weighty arguments against paper money have lately appeared, not in print but in the flesh. An Englishman has just bequeathed his two daughters their weight in 21 shilling notes. One of the girls weighs 254 3/4 and the other "took the cake" with 453 3/4.

Our Washington Letter. [OUR REGULAR LETTER.] WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23, 1883. To illustrate how much everybody is in favor of civil service reform it is only necessary to refer to the extraordinary efforts that have been made to secure full effect of the new law. There has not been such a pressure for appointments and promotions in the departments for many years as that of the last month of six weeks. The heads of departments have been anxious to provide for their friends, and the outs were anxious to get in before the much-feared civil service system was put into effect. Members of Congress, ward politicians and everybody who imagined they had the slightest influence have produced candidates either for appointment or promotion. The consequence is that at the present time there is not a vacancy existing in any of the departments. A large number of changes were made in the various divisions of the Treasury department last Saturday—the civil service law went into operation Monday following—and a large force of clerks were kept busy late in the day recording the changes and filling out the papers. Every possible vacancy in all the departments has been filled, and every vacant office has provided for his friends and promoted the favored ones under him. And now that future appointments must be made from the list of the civil service commission Congressmen will be relieved for one of their chief duties, or what has been one of their chief duties in many cases. They will have very little to do about the departments hereafter except to get a few friends promoted. They will have nothing to do with getting appointments unless they can manage to boost a favored party through a back window when no one is looking. That will be their limit.

But while everything possible has been done to anticipate the commission, it is a mistake to assume that there will be no vacancies to fill. Perhaps the number will be small for two or three months, but in the next six thousand clerks in all the Government offices have vacancies are bound to occur from natural causes. It is stated that several resignations and dismissals for cause, more than fifteen vacancies occur weekly in the combined departments. This estimate does not include the increase or reduction in the force made by special acts of Congress. It will be seen, therefore, that the civil service commission will be called upon to name 730 persons to fill vacancies which will occur during the next twelve months. So they can count on sixty a month, and there is no need to be discouraged. Considerable merit has been indulged about town at the expense of a clerk in the office of the civil service commission. A young lady in the Census office wrote to the commission for the blanks necessary to make her application for examination. They were forwarded in an envelope addressed to her at the "Census office," and it has been questioned whether the clerk who directed the letter had passed a competitive in spelling.

There is a play upon an earth letter and dollar that Washington in July and August, I don't know where it is. The thermometer does not go so much higher here than in many other cities, but we have such a humid atmosphere that a temperature of 90 or 95 degrees is almost unendurable. Then we are not favored with such cool night breezes at all times as we would wish. During the two months mentioned the thousands of Government employees take their annual vacation. Of course they do not all go at once, but they nearly all manage to get away by train. They have thirty days at Government expense. The President will understand the deluge in Washington on and the shadow of a business day. He stays at his pretty little villa in the grounds of the Soldiers' Home nearly all the time. He never comes to the White House before noon, and days after day passes without his coming at all. He has telephone connection with the departments and his own clerks, and disposes of much business without attending personally. His experience last cabinet day was rather funny. It was on a Saturday last day and the President drove in a little earlier than usual, as he had some things which he wanted to consult the members of his cabinet about before deciding. Well, he went to his library and stayed awhile. Then he went to his private quarters and started writing; then he went to the cabinet room and stayed awhile—getting a little more impatient all the while and scolding at the lagging of General Andrew Jackson. He again ran over his own papers, looked at the marble clock on the mantel, then at his watch, and no doubt gave a little in his mind. Not a single member of the cabinet appeared. Out of all patience he had, at last, ordered his coupe and was about to return to the Soldiers' Home, when Secretary Teller appeared with his Russia leather portfolio under his arm. The President simply said: "Mr. Teller, there will be no cabinet meeting to-day." It seems that the Secretary of the Interior was the only cabinet officer in Washington, and yet the President didn't know it. Yes, Mr. Brewster was not here, and yes his chief clerk was away from the Attorney General is never away from his desk. As a matter of fact Mr. Brewster left here last week for Long Branch and other places and he would be back in the fall. I mean to get away myself soon and try to do something of interest to your readers in the far west. DON FENNER.

Our Saratoga Letter.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.] SARATOGA SPRING, N. Y., July 27, 1883. The season at Saratoga never opens fairly until the races begin. At present it is extremely dull. Family parties sit in groups on the piazzas, dyspeptics discuss their Hyers and their symptoms, and landlady looks on with a hopeless air at their guests. The average guest comes to this place for rest and recuperation, and not simply for pleasure. At his home in New York City or elsewhere he is the personification of restless business activity; but in Saratoga he wisely takes matters coolly, quietly and peacefully aside, from keeping his eyes on the safety-valve of the market, pays no attention to more or less, and for the next three hours a veritable pandemonium prevailed. Brokers rushed about with limp collars, battered cuffs, and with the perspiration streaming down their worn out faces.

The idea of lunch was out of the question, no one knew what might happen during the absence. About two o'clock a young man appeared at the railing around the floor with a waiter full of sandwiches. There was a mad rush over to where he stood. The men knocked each other about, crumpled each other's hats, and stepped on each other's toes in the struggle to get at him. In less than ten minutes the youth had sold out his entire supply at twenty-five cents each. He had but two hundred feet, and the thin slices of bread and shaving of corned beef and tongue were as nothing for the starving hundreds. Then they fought among themselves. One popular operator, a tall, handsome, athletic fellow was standing a little aside from the crowd eating the sandwich which he had just captured. He had just taken one bite out of it, when a little Hebrew broker slipped up behind, took the sandwich out of his hand and pointed for a crowd. "You little dirty devil," exclaimed the big man excitedly, and running after the flying little one he aimed a blow at the back of his neck which must have knocked him senseless. A friend of the athlete however rushed up, and catching the upstart arm exclaimed: "for God's sake, don't do anything rash, it will cost you at least 1,000, if not 2,000."

And so the Lily goes at last, with a bank account of $100,000. With which city Americans have presented her in recognition of the patronage she has bestowed upon that exquisite representative of our glided youth Freddie Gehard. It is rumored that Freddie will quietly slip away with her to England. I asked a friend of his at the Brunswick Hotel whether there was any truth in this. "None whatever," he replied, "England, is not America after all, and besides Mr. Langtry is there and the lady's family and friends. They will certainly make it hot for her if she should continue on her wayward career, and make it hotter for Freddie. He will there have no luck talking Western reporters to deal with, but he will have to meet men who are in every sense his superior. English society of course is rotten from beginning to end, worse in fact than French society was in its worst days, but somehow they always manage to keep up appearances. If Freddie goes abroad at all, and means to keep up his intimacy with the Lily, the pair will have to go to Boulogne, France, that is, to the Hotel de Ville, and there he will be taken care of by the men who have lost their fortunes at the card table, unlucky and perhaps defaulting turf speculators, or heroes and heroines of the divorce courts."

I was talking with the Manager of the Manhattan Beach Hotel last Sunday. Said he, "you will notice that the attendance here is growing much more Democratic than it used to be, and it is paying all the same. We have been anything but favored by the weather this year, but I assure you that we are just $50,000 ahead in our receipts over what we earned last year up to the same date. I think this year will be the best we have ever had. The Oriental Hotel, which still remains exclusive is likewise doing unusually well. There is scarcely an unoccupied room in the house."

Bathers last Monday at Manhattan Beach were treated to an unexpected exhibition in the MATTHEW'S of swimming. A tall, muscular young Englishman came down with a young lady, evidently his sister. She was as perfect a specimen of young English womanhood as could be seen. About the medium height, her figure was the perfection of symmetry and muscular development. Her face was fair, slightly sunburnt and had a healthy look which tells of a clear mind, a good appetite and plenty of outdoor exercise. Her companion took her into the dining room, where both drank a large glass of whiskey. She drank her like a little man. Then they went over to the bath house and in a few moments they reappeared. She was a bathing suit which was yet another thing that dowdily was yet another thing. They walked to the end of the string piece where he dove off. She followed him, and they swam out together. She was a good swimmer, and kept under water, and performed all sorts of clever tricks. They created quite a sensation. When they returned to the hotel, they received the wondering looks with which they are greeted with true British unconcernedness. The International Gifs Match created a little interest here, outside of the circles directly interested either in shooting or in the rifle meet. It was a foregone conclusion that our team though good enough at the shorter ranges were no match for the Britons at the 1,000 yard range. That they did so well was a surprise to everybody. Furthermore an interest in the match was reduced to a minimum by the unseasonably squalls which preceded it. It became very plain that certain leading men in the association were determined to make the match nothing but a huge advertising scheme for the different rifle manufacturers. As all of them were eager to get their rifles adopted, their agents soon began "going for each other," like so many good wives. It took all the efforts of a disinterested member to hush up the matter.
