This is so simple that any one accustomed to the use of tools can -If you wish to be really happy take a make it in an hour or two. A slight incli nation of the board upon which the nest egg is fastened will cause the naw laid egg to roll away from under the hen, beyond her reach, as soon as it is dropped. The rear board has the same inclination toward the centre, and projects over the other board far enough to protect the egg when it has rolled away. The space between the courds is just wide enough to give free passage to the eggs. The egg box may be lined with a handful of sawdast, or chaff, to preect the shells from eracking. If the back courd be furnished with hinges, it can b used as a lid, to allow the removal of the eggs. It is a complete egg-trap, and with he oyster shells, in our case, abated the uisance of egg eating. Many think, that when a hen has contracted the habit of egg esting, the shortest way is the best, and In tead of eating she is put in a way to be aten. But a good layer is too valuable t be given up without an effort to reform be and habit, often acquired through the neg gence of the owner. The egg trap works dmirably, and secures the end desired by placing it out of power of the hen to do mis
