-HUNDREDS Write they owe their life | FARMERS' COLUMN,

Improving Farm Hames and Grounds The immediate surroundings of farmers' omes generally are far from being as at tractive in appearance as they can easily be made. Indeed the rural front yards are, as a rule, much less beautiful and interesting than those of people in the same genera circumstances in towns and cities. In the latter, lawns are well cared for, and choice ornamental trees, shrubs, and flowers, ar much oftener met with than about country homes. There is no valid reason for this Such embellishments are not more easily acquired in the city, but just the reverse The farmer has teams, implements and manures for putting the house grounds in the best condition for ornamental treatment; labor is quite as cheap as in town, while sodding a lawn costs far less in the country. Trees and plants are as cheap to the farmer as to any one, while in many aces some of the best kinds for ornamen m be had from the woods for the digging-There may be points in which life on the farm lacks the attractions common to town life, but in charming home grounds the farmer is certainly to blame if the city dweller excels him. It is often wondered why country life has not charms sufficient to hold the boys to the farm, and that they grow up longing for the city. If more at tention were given to making their home surroundings more cheerful and attractive for the sons and others of the family, there would be less heard of this trouble. And in all such work every proper effort is sure to be seconded by the wife; while nothing is more natural than for the children to be enthusiastic helpers in this work. Such mprovements of course require some outlay, but this can hardly prove otherwise than a good investment. Every dollar judiciously spent in this way will soon be returned many fold in the increased valuation of any place, should it be desirable to sell, to say nothing of the greater happiness and love of home that will thus be inspired Now that long evenings are at hand, this subject abould receive due consideration. Plans may be drawn up for an improved arrangement of walks, drives, flower beds, shrubbery, borders, and other matters Every detail of there can be decided upon, and entered upon a map, long be fore winter is over, so that when spring opens the work can go on intelligently and to the best advantage, -Ellias A. Hints on Hog Killing.

Skill and practice are needed to take ou the intestiness neatly, without cutting or breaking them and soiling the flesh. Run the knife lightly down marking the belly straight, cut to the bone between the thighs, and in front of the ribs and fully, not to out beyond them, open the abdomen by unning the hand or two fingers behind the knife with its edge turned outward. Little use of the knife is required to loosen the entrails. The fingers, rightly used, will do rost of the severing. Small strongstrings, ut in proper lengths, should be always at hand to quickly tie the severed ends of any small intestines cut or broken by chance An expert will catch the entire offal in a targe tin pan or wooden vessel, holding it between himself and the hog. Unskilled operators, and those opening very large hege, need an assistant to hold this. The entrails, and then the liver, heart, etc., being all re fifth that may have escaped inside. Spread the cut edges apart by inserting a short stick between them to admit free circulation of cool air. When dripping is over, or the hanging posts are wanted for other car wases, remove the dressed ones, and hang Cloths, Cassimeres, them in a cool cellar or other safe place un til the whole flesh is thoroughly cooled through. Or if, for convenience and easier work, the carcasses are cut up before cooling. let all the pieces lie apart for at least half a day. Removing the lard from the long intestines requires expertness that can only be learned by practice. The fingers do most of this cleaner, safer, and better than a knife. A light feed the night before killing leaves the intestines less distended and less likely to be broken .- J. M. STAHL, ID

Take Care of Your Orchard Trees.

When the owner visits his young orchard fter the snows have melted away in springhe often makes the disheartening discovery that many of his trees have been girdled by mice or rabbits. Judging from our own correspondence, the damage by these animale must in the aggregate be very heavy. The first thing to be done is to examin the extent of the injury. Frequently it is not so bad as it looks, and the inner bark is not entirely removed. If this covers even a fourth of the wounded portion, and con neets the bark above the wound with that below it, the chances are that the wound will heal if drying can be prevented. The ordinary grafting wax, applied on old, worn otton cloth, or on paper, as used in graftng, should be applied over the injured portion. This, especially on quite small trees, will prevent all evaporation. Anoth er application is the old grafting clay, made by thoroughly mixing and beating together stiff clay with half as much cow manure. Apply this over the wound quite thickly, and fasten it in place by wrapping with an old cloth and tying with strings. If theirner bark is completely gone, nothing remains but to bridge over the wound with cions, and thus restore the communication between the roots and the top. The cions may be taken from the the same tree if they can be spared, or these from another of the same kind will answer as well .- Am. Agri-
