Mr. S. M. Certier of Brooklyn, N. Y., FARMERS' COLUMN

Raising Poultry as a Business.

There is just now much interest in post try raising, and a disposition to take it up on a large scale. The following extract om ere of our recent letters will give an idea of the many inquiries made of us: "Is poultry raising a profitable business, and would you advise a young man to invest one thousand dollars in it?" - This might be newered, in brief: Poultry are profitable and we would not advise a young man (not an old one) to at once invest one thousand dollars in it. Parmers find the poultry vard the most profitable part of the farm, in proportion to the capital invested. Many reckon in this way: If fifty fowls are pro fitable, five hundred will be ten times as profitable. This is an instance in which figures do not tell the truth. As soon as the number of fowls is doubled, troubles are quadrupled. A range and houses which will keep fitty in perfect health, will be overcrowded with one bundred, and all the troubles due to a dense population will follow. While we believe that poultry keeping on a large scale may be made profitable, apital to purchase birds and build houses, s not the only thing needful. Those who undertake the business, must give their whole time and attention to it. One point is well settled-fowls can not be kept together in large numbers, and thrive. The whole metter requires careful study and experiment. The beginner should start in a small way, and increase as success seem to warrant it. The point to be determined at the outset, is: Shall eggs or dressed fowls be the object? Each requires a different management throughout, though the two may; in a measure, be united. Starting with abundant capital, and no experience, will surely end in failure. The best works upon poultry management insist upon keep ing fowls in small flocks; this is regarde ssential to success.-P. H. Jacobs, in Am Agriculturist.

Where Gardening Pays. The farmer can readily raise a large share

I the garden vegetables in demand is places of moderate size. Let the farme who would undertake to raise crops more profitable than the staple farm products begin with those most easily produced, and gradually work his way to those which are most profitable. In a town where there are factories employing numbers of foreign workmen, cabbages are always in demand and the earlier they are, the better the price they will bring. Most farmers grow latabbages; to raise early kinds, he must ther sow the seed in the fall and keep the lants through the winter in a cold frame r sow in early spring in a hot bed and orward the plants to be ready to set out when the ground is in condition. Either ethod mout of the usual way of farming. ut there is nothing about it that can no be readily learned. Quions are always in lemand; if the butbs are bunched and sold while two thirds grown, the crop is a very profitable one. Sweet corn in as readily aised as field corn, and when the ears are off, the stalks are in excellent condition to cure for fodder; these will pay the cost o cultivation, leaving what is received for the ears clear profit. Green peas and string beans are easily raised, and it pickers are a hand, will pay well, as will new potatoes beets, etc. The crops here suggested, with the exception of early cabbages, are as easily raised as ordinary farm crops. I will be well for those near a local market to make a trial of these at first, and gradu ally increase the list. Form gardening offers a ready relief to those who find that "farming does not pay," and those who need to grow more profitable crops should sak into its possibilities. The works of Henderson, Harris, Brill, and Quinn, each give valuable aid to the cultivation. Success will, in part, depend upon locality supply of manure, quality of seed, and the character of the market; but the probabili ties are greatly in favor of a profitable re turn from a well conducted farm garden.

Da. THURBER, In Am. Agriculturist.

Cross-bred Fowls-Crossing fowls enables us to combine the perits of different breeds. The Brahma has a very small comb, is heavily feathered and grows to large size. By crossing this breed with the Leghorn, we reduce the mb of the latter, increase the size of the body, and afford heavier feathering. The rossed fowl will sit, though the propensity s not so strong as in the pure Brahma, and the good qualities of both breeds are blended. A cross of the Brown Lechern and Partridge Cochin permits of uniformity of color, and makes a superb fewl for cressing on the large coarse hens, the offspring usually being larger than either of the parents When two non-sitting breeds are crossed such as Leghorns and Humburgs, the result is sometimes persistent sitters. An excellent cross, is to use a Langshan cockerel with large common hene, the pullets from which are mated with a Houdan cockerel This gives a hardy, early maturing, largebodied fowl, and if a Plymouth Rock cock erel be used the succeeding season, it will be an advantage. The Langthan is the arliest maturing of any of the Asiatics, but has dark legs, which are considered objectonable by some. For plumpuess of body, yellow legs, and hardiness, the new breedthe Wyandotter (formerly American Sebrights) are equal to any. They are nearly as large in size as the Plymouth Rocks. Crossed towls do not produce uniform chicks. A pure-blooded cockerel must always be mated with crossed pullets. If this is not done, the chicks hatched from the crossed stock will be of different colors, shapes, and sizes, as they usually revert to different ancestors. Sandy soil is best for the feathered legged breeds. Plenty of room in the coops should always be allowed, without regard to the breed of fewl .- P. H. Acons, in Am. Agriculturist.
