The firm True. When the thunder roars, and the week in S-ptember came a cold snap which lightning flashes, and the hig drops come killed the squash vines in the first location leaving a portion of the crop about half down, the woman who is caught out in the storm devotes her agony to the thought grown. This, and the subsequent frosts of that month, did not injure the vines near the drain, and they were still vigorous when the squashes were gathered in October. The same influence in prolonging the esson was noticed in the best crop grown upon the undrained land in 1882 and the same crop grown in 1883. The soil was so wet and muddy in the previous season, that the beet seed rotted and had to be planted three times, and after that many gaps were filled with turnips. It was a very poor crop In the past season the beet seed came up tairly, the few vacant were filled by transplanting, and a five crop of mangolds and augar beets was gathered, at much less cost of labor. This is very conclusive proof of the advantage o draming. It raises the temperature of the soil so that seeds will vegetate two or three weeks earlier in the spring, and it retains the summer hest so that damaging frosts are kept off several weeks in the autumn. Draining is of special service in raising o all crops of tropical origin, as equashes molons, tomatoes, egg plant, peppers, corn, etc. It is the effectual cure of wet land in all climates, and indispensable to the profitable cultivation of all swamps and spongy land in the northern portions of our coun try. It will add from four to six weeks to the length of the growing season, for many of the crops grown in the market garden and upon the farm. Cows .- Milch cows are generally doing hable work at this senson, and should be fed and cared for accordingly. It is fully to milk a cow up to within a few days of calving; it is running the animal machine at a reckless speed, and a break will come amewhere, Highly fed cows require a eduction of the rations as the per od of culving approaches. This is esp cially rue of high bred animals which are more r less pampered. The young stock, when intested with lice, should have a mixture of equal parts of sweet oil and kerosene rubbed thoroughly upon the surface of the kin.

Swike intended for pork are now mainly disposed of, or should be. The store pigs need on ly moderate feeding and clean warm pens. Provide now for young pigs in May, the most favorable time for them, as the weather is warm and green food abundant. If possible use a purc-bred toar. As a rule it is not the most prefitable to raise purebred swine for the park barrel or for the market either. Portray .--- Unless the house be warm an the tood wholesome and abundant, the hens will furnish very few eggs. The birds enjoy the winter summine.
