AFTER THE HARVEST.

BY O. C. AURINGER.

The scythe is rusting in the tree,

The mower in a revery,

A goodly nan the mower is,

A form of manty grace is his,

A head as trenchant as a god's.

A man of thought; the harvest o'er,

Its heat and triumphs left behind,

If rests, and gives himself once more

To pleasure of the heart and mind.

Such pleasured All the glorious skies-

He glories in their fires and storms.

The sweet green earth he deems most fair;

He knows her mo-ds of ease and toil;

Sees blessings springing from the soil.

To him their scerets yield; he knows,

His friendships lie on every hand,

In man and cattle, bird and beer-

The language of the flower and tree.

Are turned to sunshine in his verns;

Great hature's joy is in the strains.

For him the cloud shall break and pass,

And show behind the shattered bars

The glory of the sky and stars.
