Preparation of the soil-If there is any one thing more than at other that the farmer fails to realize, it is the importance of thoroughly preparing the soil before the seed is planted, or the plant set. Our grandfathers, for heed crops, spread their coarse manure on the surface "You thought! you thought! What busithe land and plowed it under, then they ness had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for hiling my order," said the furrowed the ground with a small Lorse plo *, and where the seed was dropped pu adignant caller, contemptuously, "There, a half shovel full of the finer manure, take the thing back and give me my money. which the seed was dropped and covered. thus leaving the manure unmixed with the soil, and where it would lay undisturbed until the land was plowed for another crop nor was any effort made to pulverize th soil until the crop was up large enough hoe. If they had a tree to set they simply dug a small hole just large enough to ceive the roots, and without any prepara tion of the soil, filles up the hole and left the tree to take its natural course. Our fathers made a step of progress by spreading the manure on the surface after the ground was plowed, and with the old toothed. A harrow mixed the manure with the soil, and when they set a tree many o hem dug a hole much larger than the row of the tree extended, and after antting th but at the best time.

elore the trees are set. by deep plowing and the thoraugh mixing of the manuwith the soil. It is found that by thus horoughty preparing the soll a short time sefore the trees are set, they start off the irst year with a growth that is highly sat sfactory. Our age is one of rapid progress. We are d content to wait the slow progress of sture when left to hersalt, but we find in for our interest to use such means as are at our command to has ton the growth of the crops we grow in our fields, orthands and godens. The more carefully we stuly the ways of nature the better shall we be preparel to assist her. Very few in our day believe, as our grandfathers seemed to, that plants feed on coarse materials, and so place the manure in little heaps where it can remain undisturbed throughout the growing season; but they realize the absurd ity of the idea, and so spread the manure evenly over the entire field, and mingle it with the soil where it will be frequently stirned during the growing sesson. By thus assisting nature in her efforts to produce naterials for plant growth as fast as they can be taken up by the growing crops, a growth is obtained that is far above that which would be produced by nature unas sisted .- Ele.
