Robert Todd Lincoln, Secretary of War.

Robert Todd Lincoln, Secretary of War, is the oldest and only surviving son of Abraham Lincoln, and was born in Springfield, Ill., August 13, 1843. He received a good education in the common schools of that city, but concluded his preparatory course at Exeter, N. H. He entered Harvard College from which he graduated in 1864. After his graduation he received a commission as Captain, and saw considerable service in the field, but because of his youth he was kept a close companion to his father at the White House the greater part of the time.

After the exciting scenes of his father's assassination, he settled in Chicago, where he studied law, and was in a few years admitted to the bar. He then began the practice of his profession in that city, and secured the management of several large estates and many Eastern Insurance Companies who loaned large sums of money on Chicago real estate. In attending to these trusts Mr. Lincoln developed superior executive ability. He married the only daughter of ex-Sec'y James Harlan.

During the Chicago convention Mr. Lincoln was an ardent advocate of the nomination of Gen. Grant, and presided at the immense Grant meeting held in Chicago a few days before the nomination for the Presidency was made. Before that time his only active effort in politics had been as a member of a citizens' committee formed in Chicago to effect a reformation and purification in local political affairs.

President Garfield's selection of Mr. Lincoln for Secretary of War was due to a determination to honor the name of our great War President, and to satisfactory his administration of the War Department during Garfield's incumbency that President Arthur retained Mr. Lincoln in his Cabinet, and now finds him prominently mentioned as the Republican Presidential candidate. Mr. Lincoln disclaims any ambition for further political advancement, but his modest, unassuming manner only induces his admirers to more earnestly advance his claims.

Sec'y Lincoln is one of the most popular officials that the War Department has ever been under, and in social and political circles, regardless of his party affiliations, he is a universal favorite. In form and feature Mr. Lincoln has no resemblance whatever to his illustrious father, but in executive ability and intuitive comprehension of public affairs, he has certainly inherited the sterling characteristics of Abraham Lincoln.

LEAP-YEAR VICTIM.

Miss Jennie is a winsome girl—

The fairest of her kind;

And I would be a heartless churl

Did I not love her well.

But when into my life she came

Her life of passion glowed.

I scream and run away for fear

She'll see my tell tale blushes.

Miss Susie is so sweet and mild,

And loves me, oh so dearly,

I can't reject the little child—

'T would drive her crazy, nearly;

But as she hangs upon my arm

And sings her hopeless sorrow,

I murmur: "It is getting late—

Please come around to-morrow."

And there is my romping Nell—

And there is my fond Ethel—

And there is my little Nellie,

And prattling little Della;

And I am wooed by Elsie,

And courted, too, by Jessie,

While Maggie lolls upon my knee,

And dithers charming Bessie.

There's still another—homely she—

The quaint, unworldly Eliza—

When first she came a wooing me,

Oh, how I did despise her!

But as the fondly lingered near

There fell, like dripping honey,

This sweet assurance on my ear—

"So, though I heap for Jennie's curls

And Della so impassioned,

And hanker for the other girls

So sweetly, grandly fashioned,

It seems decreed that I should part

From all these charming wifely

And sacrifice my manly heart

To quaint Eliza's riches.

A SOLDIER'S ROMANCE.

Over twenty years ago, on that fatal

July day when the greatest artillery duel known in ancient or modern times took place between the mighty contending armies near the quiet village town of Gatysburg, Pa., Mr. Robert Carson,

now a well-known citizen of Baltimore, was dangerously wounded. At that time he was a private in a Pennsylvania regiment, having been born and raised in Philadelphia, and at that heroic field this gentleman fell, struck in the side by a mule-bait coming from the never known just exactly where. After lying on the field for ten hours, suffering intensely from his wound, thirst and lack of needful attention, and served by desperation to almost superhuman efforts he crawled through the darkness of the succeeding night, some distance in the country from the battle-field. As dawn broke he sank totally exhausted and almost lifeless by the side of a spring of water. There he was found by a young girl from one of the neighboring farm-houses, who thus early in the morning had ventured from her home to obtain water from the spring for culinary purposes. The wounded soldier was young in years, not twenty-five, and possessed, notwithstanding his disabilities from suffering, a handsome interior face. The young lady
