The catalogues are confusing with their many varieties, old and new. For home use, no new or untried kinds are worth tak ing ssa gift; what we want is fruit and plenty of it. Charles Downing, Bidwell, and Sharpless are among the reliable kinds that have been tested and may be planted with confidence. Having ordered the plants, prepare a place for them. The size of the bed will of course depend upon tha number of plants, which are to be two feet apart each way from one another, and two feet from the margins of the bed. Make the soil rich with old, decomposed manure an l ashes, to be worked in as deep as posrible by spading. When the plants come, their roots should be shortened or cut back to two-thirds or one-ball their former length, and all the dead leaves removed. In planting, open a wide hole with the hand, and spreading the roots in all directions, separating those that are matted, carefully work the earth in among them, and having covered them with earth press it firmly over them. The plants will scon start into growth, and new leaves open It is probable that clusters of flower bude will appear in the center of some of the plants, if so, pinch them off as soon as they are seen, as we now wish to raise plants and not fruit. As the season advances sunners will be formed, and at length a bud will appear upon the end of each and finally take root. It the runners do not become fixed readily-as they are often blown about by the winds-place a clod of earth apon them to hold them fast. After the plant from the first bud has grown to some size, that will throw out runners, and so on, all the season. The object being to raise as many plants as possible, the runners should be watched, and not allowed to interfere with one another, but distributed evenly over the bed. If necessary water the bed, and pull up by hand all weeds that appear .- DR. THURBER, in the Am. Agriculturist. Teach the Boys to Use Tools.

Last year a friend of mine, who has three boys, selected a Chest of Tools as a premium for collecting clubs for an agricultural paper, and surprised an delighted the lads with it. They went to work and fitted themselves up a workshop in the loft over the wagon-shed, and there they con trive to spend many an hour pleasantly and profitably. My friend said to me, "I am surprised to see how proficient the boys are becoming in the use of their tools. Why, they have made us many little articles for use about the house and barn, to nore than pay for the cost of the tools, if I had bought them for cash, and if they keep on thus, a carpenter will be unnee cessary here." This experience can be re peated in any family where there are boys to the satisfaction and benefit of all concerned. Give the boys a chance to show what they can do. A set of tools will keep them busy on rainy days and odd spells, and out of mischief. Every success will encourage them in larger undertakings, and uite unconsciously they will develop a knowledge of mechanics which will be practical and useful to themselves and thers all their lives, and almost every day, the year round, on the farm, about the cost of a set of tools good epough for them to experiment with, is small, and cannot be invested to better account. If you can not pare the money, encourage them to get up club for a paper giving premium chests of cols. If they do not quite succeed, help by contributing a little cash for the differ ence. The investment will come back be fore you know it. Most farmers having more expensive tools, do not like to have boys use them for fear of possible damages, and they grow up almost entirely ignorant of saw, and plane, and chisel. Let them have tools of their own, and show them how to take proper cars of them. Teach them all you know about them, and set them at little easy jobs. When they do these well, let them know their work is sypreciated, and they will become ambitious to do still better work, and take pride in it; so will you, when you come to see that they are able to do what you have heretofore depended on outside labor for. One of the most convenient things about the house or farm, is a man who can use tools.-Earn E. REXFORD, in Am. Agriculturist. Saving the Road Wash.

Every road not on a dead level has more or less debris which has a fertilizing value washed off upon its side. The water itself is valuable, and will make grass wherever t spreads. In a hilly country or one of gentle grades, nearly all this water, and the fertilizing matter it carries, may be turned off at frequent intervals upon the adjoining pastures and meadows. The dust and debris of the highway consists of finely pulverized soil and stone, which coutains more or less lime, potssh and other valuable material so minutely divided that water makes it immediately available for plant food. Iron and steel tires, horse and ox shoes, and above all the frost, have been st work upon it all through the winter. Appreciable quantities of manure have been dropped upon it by beasts of burden, and their feet bave mixed it with the road dust. and made a nice compost. Its value h seen in the rank growth of grass and briars wherever it lodges. It will pay big wages for all the labor needed to turn this wash off, through culverts or an open ditch, on to the adjoining pastures and mowing land. -Am, Agriculturist.
