On the Question of the Age, By COL. GEORGE W. BAIN of Louisville, Ky.,

"THE PRINCE OF THE PLATFORM."

Wednesday, May 7th, 1884, At 7:30 o'clock P. M.

Music by the LEHIGHTON ORCHESTRA

TESTIMONIALS. Rev. Roward Henderson, his former pastor, says of him: "He is the prince of the platterm, and has been a Christian and philacanthropist from his boyhood. He is terribly in same at in his work of reform, yet his humor shakes all the colovets from the heart," One rge W. Hain. Esq., has been lecturing in thanda recently, and his loctures have awakened great interest wherever he has spoken. The Hendford Datty Exposition cays of his visit to this city:
"Whichiffs Hail was crawfed from platfrom to the duors have twenting. Every available space about the building, even in the gallery and the reading room, was occupied, and hindreds left the hall for want of standing room, it was truly a magnificent and-ing room. It was truly a magnificent andgallery and the residing room, was occupied, and hundreds left the hall for want of standing room. It was truly a manifect anding room. It was truly a manifect anding room. It was truly a manifect anding roce of Brantford. It was evolent from the very beginning that the audience and into urator were well matched — a magnifice. It audience and a gran orator. Its possesses ware combination of powers. He is logical tunginative, and uncitonal and when he has constructed his argument his troaginative, and uncitonal and when he has constructed his argument his troagination plays upon it insulighting upon a morn broad, and con pistely captures his hearers by his subline dights at oratory. We have never heard anything more bountful and sublime than were some of his descriptive gentences. When he turned his arguments, thus silination, upon the audience with a pathetic tenderness which is trestabilite, they understood something of the power of human cluquence."

Geo. W. Bain, of Kentucky, has no equal Sected. He does not act as though he nough blimself anything remarkable, and e does not. He is thoroughly good, and that one great cause of his power. His heart in the work and all who listen to him feet is in the work and all who listen to him for that a good man is plending with them. He Is divinely called to the great and grand work to which he is so increasantly engaged and God bonors the work.
