CLIMATE. - While the cold is not so serere, the temperature of mid summer is not excessive or trying as faither North. Our schools are longer, and therefore our crops are not killed by late or early frosts.

THE SOIL is of a variety of composition. dayey, gravell lime stone, s atc. gandy leam, etc. This great variety of solizand the mileness and advantages of climate will account for the variety of p oducts, SUCIETY.-No section in the Union has better executed lines. The biersings of political, civil and religious liberty are no where more fully protected than in N. C.

IN GENERAL .- The great fertility of our lands, the mildness of our climate, free from the seorching and with ring heat of the lay it is now conceded by the Medical Fra uth and the extreme cold and freezes of the North go to show that North Carolina is surely the most favored spricultural rection in America. Nature has one only given us tages of producing, but it has prowided us with water-power to work up what ditted to any part of the bedy, which is no the soil produces for us.

Points of a Good Farm Horse. rho is an cothusiastic admirer of the Morgans," which are indeed fine animals is the farmers of that State have them, and ose of many other localities, also, writes. I find in my newspaper scrap book a description that very nearly tallies with the good Morgan horses that we have here. The best horses for the farm, and for most other surposes, should possess a good degree of telligence. A full, clear eye, with no wicked lear, is set in a clean, long face, expressing a mild disposition. His neck well arched, not short or very long, with well developed muscles. Shoulders strong and solid at the base. Back straight, firm balry, having what Virgil calls a double spine, and joined to the rump by an even mass of mucle. Barrel round, and chest deep; his wind strong and digestion perfect Such a horse may be of any size from 900 pounds to 1,500;of any hight from 15 hands to 165 hands; of any color, although bays, browns, sorrels, and grays are the best, and he will be capable of great endurance or the road or at the plow. He should be selected with reference to the work he is t perform and the locality in which he is t ater or thin gruel, and given as a drench be kept perfectly dry, and free from any It smelling surroundings, such as the vapors of a stable, or artificial manures, etc., or it will absorb them, and thus be one septic, and of no medicinal value. It

Bust Way to Apply Poultry Manure-Hovery farmer, and every keeper o valuable poultry droppings really are not a handful of them would ever be allowed to go to waste. A single tablespoonful where needed will make a thrifty hill of corn where, without it, there might be only a a cally growth of puny stalks. Prof. Voeleker, of the Royal Agricultural Society of England a lyizes as the least expensive and best way of using poultry manure to mix it with dry earth, ashes, and the like into a compost Mixed with about twice the quantity of dry, earthy matters of this kind, it will soon be reduced into a fairly dry and powdery state, in which it may be readily sown broadcast or with the drill, and found use ful in growing any kind of garden vege tables. For root crops, such as turnips currots, and mangels, it is advertised that poultry manure be mixed, after reducing to a powdery state, with an equal weight of superphosphate, and the mixture drilled in at the rate of 500 pounds to the sere. In making poultry manure into compost with earth, Prof. Voelcker warns against mixing quicklime with it, as the effect would be to liberate the ammonia, the most of which would escape and be lost. On the other hand, he recommends as a positive advantage mixing soot with this compost. In the absence of soot, the next best thing, in his opinion, is to mix in burnt plaster, to which a small quantity of superphysphate is added, the free acid of which will effectually prevent the escape of the ammonia. A mixture of two parts burnt plaster and one part superphosphate may be kept in readiness to mix with the the fresh chicken droppings for the purpose of absorbing the excess of moisture and thus facilitate its being reduced to a dry and friable nature. Three parts of fresh chicken manure and one part of the proceeding mixture of burnt plaster and superphosphate if kept under cover for a few days and turned once or twice during the time, and then passed through a screen or sieve, will be be found to be most efficacous when applied at the rate of from 600

This was recently proveby taking the live weights of two lots o sheep, and simply separating them by or dinary net, the artificial food, corn and cake, being carefully weighed out to each lot slike daily, one pint of charcoal being added to one lot only. When re weighed. prar to selling to the butcher, the Increas In weight was in favor of charcosi by 16 25 per cent. Sanitation causes easy and com plets direction; and assimilation only car account for these resuits, which charcos alone can accomplish. The charcoal should be given mixed with the food, except in urgent cases, when it may be mixed in The dose is one pint to every twenty five hood of sheep or lambs, one quarter pine per head for full grown cuttle, horses, as sigs, half the quantity for young cattle, and wo tempoonfuls to one dessert spoonful for young calves, daily, when suffering fron discuss, or in ill condition. To keep in good health, and fortife against diseases the dose should be given two or three times per week, according to the class of food they are having, and the state of the atmosphere. The best plan is to a wet a quantity of bran, pollard (mult combings); mix th harcoal among it, and then among the food you give them. For rapid and healthy fattening of cattle, it should be used daily among their food.
