MR. BLAYNE. Republican candidate for President, has submitted his letter of acceptance. It contains 6000 words, which makes it a very long letter, but it is one of the dull-st specimens of its kind ever inflicted on a community. The gentleman then launches into a long-winded essay on the affairs of the country. Everybody knows the man and the 6000 words he uses will have no more effect on the voters than if he had simply said: "I ne opt." Mr. Logan also announces his appeptance of the nomination for Vice-President.
