An animal which will jump over a fence is not only a nuisance on their own account but they will often in jumping themselves break the fence or gate, so that the rest of "I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since the late the berd will follow them. If a preventhen I have kept the Pecconal constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be me, for family use, and I have found it to be some a stable, or in a stable, or in a animal has to be kept in a stable, or in a small lot by themselves, with an extra high fence. A simple method of keeping either a horse or cow in any kind of enclosprompt cure of all bronchial and lung ure is to put a common halter on them. Remove the tig-strap to it, and put on in its place a piece of half-inch rope eleven feet long. Three feet (or thereabouts, depending some on the size of the animal) from the end attached to the halter, tie in firmly a ring; bring the rope between the forelegs, and up around the body just behind the fore-legs. This will bring the ring that was tied into the rope under the chest, and between the fere logs. Now tie the loose end into the ring under the body. The animal cannot now raise its head high enough to jump, and will be found where it is put regardless of its jumping proclivities. After a little practice in putting this rigging on, the medium will be struck in not making it too tight so as to tret th eanimal, nor yet so loose that they can get over the fence. What'll You Take! Mr. Jerry P. Thomas, Central Park Hotel, 59th street 7th Ayenue, New York, writes as follows: Last summer I suffered fearfully with neuralgia and could not get fearfully with neuralgia and could not get any rest, night or day. A friend who had used St. Jacobs Oil, thought so highly of its healing qualities that he gave me some to try. I tried it and obtained the first night's rest in weeks and was cured. I have found it to be the very best remedy. I keep it constantly in my house for my family, have recommended it to others and would not be without it.

Cross-Bred Horses-The cross made by breeding half or threequarter breed "Percheron-Norman" mares to Clyde horses results very favorably. Some of the best heavy draft horses in New York city have thus combined blood of these two grand breeds. In them the sound, well-shaped, hard feet of the Percheron carry the heavy bodies of the muscular, broad-chested Clyde, with their large joint ed flat legs, while they take after their dams in being short coupled, with moder ately sloping shoulders and fine action.

The raising of these druft horses, if by good sires, is profitable, those weighing fourteen hundred to sixteen hundred psunds bring three hundred dollars in the market at five years old. The demand is so great now that we suppose it would be uite impossible for a dealer to pick up a car load from first hands in any part of the country within a radius or fifty miles. The reason for this is that yearlings, and two and three.year-olds, are largely bought up from the western breeders, and sold to go still further west among the pioneers, who raise them and use them for breeding puroses. The farmer who undertakes to supply his insatiable market, must be on his guard. There have been bundreds of veritable brutes imported. Purc-blooded they may be, but they are not good. 'The supply of first class horses of either French, Scotch, or Enlish "shire" blood is limited, and the demand here is so great that the importers n many cases have brought out anything that would sell. So we have stallions standing all over the country who only, as it were by accident, ever get decent foal. Still, even these "great, ungainly, gaunt, and awkward" halr-bloods, bring a pretty good price. Their sale cannot, however be depended upon, and the only safe policy is to breed from first-class sires. - Cor. WELD in American Agriculturist for No

We refer to the German-American National Bank Washington, D. C., the Royal Swedish. Norwegian and Danish Legations, at Washington: Hon, Jos. Casey, late Chief Justice U. S. This is score or two hundred. Whatever method of feeding is adopted, let it be liberal. Let them have all the good feed they will estno more, no less. Let them have good, dry, comfortable quarters to sleep in, and disturb them as little as possible. Pigs are in part hibernating animals. The more they sleep the better for them and their owner. We do not want to fatten pigs in winter. We simply want to keep them in healty, growing condition, and the fatter they are when winter sets in, the easier it will be to carry them through the winter. Pigs well wintered, are in good condition to thrive well on grass and clover next sumner. They will do far better on pasture alone than young spring pigs. We are not now advocating having young pigs come in the autumn, but if you have them and cannot sell them, or do not wish to, then take the best of care of them, and feed liberally. The most profitable pork we have ever made, was from young pigs which had been well cared for through the previous winter, and the next summer fattened on clover pasture.—Joseph Hannis in American Agriculturist for November.
