DAY'S HORSE POWDER. Healed the horse of the old year. THE DEATH OF THE OLD YEAR. Full knee deep lies the winter snow, and the winter winds are wearily sighing...

He lied still, he doth not move; He will not see the dawn of day. He hath no other life above; He gave a friend, and a true, true love, And the new year will take 'em away.

old and third are unknown, and where there are no signs or tears. "Mamma, the little girl cried. "Oh, mamma, I'm so hungry; but I have something to eat!"

"I told you, he said, with a sneer, born solely of the devil, "what you would come to if you married that man who you said would do so much for you. And now you are there. Well, people who make their beds must lie in them. I've got nothing for you."

Mr. Robertson waited to hear no more. It was her only brother who had spoken, and it was to her own niece he had called her such a name. Any- thing, anything was better than this.

It all can be compressed in a few American journalistic words. Born and raised in comfortable circumstances, her beauty and accomplishments made her a belle in the social sphere in which she lived.

THE NEXT MORNING, the day before Christmas, dawned clear, cold and sharp. Little Forget-me-not woke early, and began to get for food. And, alas, there was none; absolutely nothing for her.

THE DAY slowly passed away. The mother spent the long, dreary time silently praying and ruminating to the door watching for the expected visit of the child passed the hours alternately crying and begging for food, and falling into the uneasy, fitful slumbers which frequently precede death in many of its varied forms.

"Mamma, Little Forget-me-not feebly said, "I am dying to die. I won't be hungry in heaven, will I?"

"No, no, no, my child!" "No, no, no, my child!" "No, no, no, my child!" "No, no, no, my child!"

THE WRITTED, distracted mother caught the lifeless, inanimate form of her child in her arms, and kissing her repeatedly, cried, "Oh, Little Forget-me-not, speak, speak, speak, darling, once more. Say one word, baby, to your mother."

It was nearly twelve o'clock, noon, before the lady member of the investigating committee of the local charitable organization stood at the door of the tenement house, and asked for Mrs. Robertson.

THE FRENCH widow took on dreadfully at the funeral of her husband. "Why, madame," said her maid, "you hated him so while living, I do not see why you should be so demonstrative now that he is dead."

GOD had kept his promise. She was at rest. God had answered her prayers; Little Forget-me-not was cold and hungry no more!

"Two gentlemen were walking up the street engaged in a lively conversation. "Since you have some notion of marrying," said one, "why don't you take Margaret, your sister's charming friend?"

THE teacher in one of the schools was a little crochety the other morning and made the girls stand around a little livelier than usual. One of the little misses, who had been unbridled, exclaimed to her companion, "Never mind, Cleopatra is elected and she'll be turned out."

"I've a perfect picture of Mr. McGinniss." "Good morning, Mrs. McGinniss." "Good morning, John." "It's a fine child you have in your arms, Mrs. McGinniss."

"That backing cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. Sold by W. F. Biery Weisport, Dr. C. T. Horn Lehigh, Pa.
