judgment for $895,000 in favor of the Danville, Hazleton and Wilkesbarre Railroad Company against Simon P. Kase. The litigation in this suit has been pending for years, each party claiming that the other owed about $500,000. Mr. and quart of lard from him. We think it must cided that the Colonel owed about $800,000. Judge Thayer dismissed the exceptions to this report, remarking that "although the papers in this case are exceedingly volminous, the printed documents alone covering more than 1500 pages, it is neither complicated in its nature nor obscure in its facts. The question for adjudication concern the measure of responsibility which is to be applied to an officer of an incorporated company who assumed the control of its affairs and the management of its prop erty. After a long, laborious and esrefu investigation of the case we are unable to see that the master has committed any error in the finding of the facts or the application of the rules of law arising upon them, and a minute examination of the acmunt between the company and the defendant by the master has failed to convince us that he has done any injustice to the latter. Under these circumstances it is unnecessary for us to multiply words, to go again over the ground which the master bus no carefully trodden, or to heap up argoments and authorities to sustain the conclusions which he has reached, and which he maintains with so much ability and learning."
