TIMES AND SEASONS.

BY W. J. LINTON There's a time-the proverb tells us-For all things under the sun;

Even so may be proper seasons For good works to be done, And for good words to be said, In the fear lest I or you day miss the happy occasions,

When the trees are heavy with leaves When the leaves lie underfoot, When fruit on the board is frequent, And while there is rind or root;

When the rain comes down from When the sun comes after rain,

When the autumn fields are waving With the weight of gelden grain; When the hills are purple with heather, When the fells are black with cold,

When the larches are gay with their tas When nuts are shrivel'd and old; Whenever there's growth in the spring-time Or June close follows May, And so long as the first of January

Happens on New Year's day; When mushrooms in spirng the meadows, Or toadstools under the trees, When the goats gyrate in the sunshine, When the oak-boughs strain in the breeze In the days of the cuckeo and swallow,

When the sex-gulls flee the foam, When the night-jar croons in the gleaming Or the owl goes silently home ; When the lake is a placid mirror.

When the mountains melt in mist, When the depths of the lake are as pillars of On a floor of amethyat: When a rainbow spans the morning, When the thunder rends the night,

When the snow on the hills is rosy red With the blush of the wakening lights When the soul is heavy with sadness, When the tears fall drop by drop,

When the heart is glad as the heart of him Who climbs to a mountain top; When youth unrolls like a bracken-frond, When age is grandly gray As the side of a craig that is riven and scarr'd With the storms of yesterday:-

Helieve that in all of these reasons Some good may be done or said, And whenever the loving thought and will Are loving enough to wed; And well is it with the happy heart That hath thoroughly understood How the "time for all things under the sun"
