facts of great value :

Sea-Weed as a Manure-

In the shore towas and in the districts penetrated by tide water streams and soves sea-weeds of various kinds are much used for fortilizing the land. There is a great difference in the character and value of this marine vegetation, the most valuable coming from rocky shores and deep waters and the less valuable from the flats and bays, where fresh water mingles with the tides. The Eel-grass (Zostera marina), which is not a true alga, or sea-wrack grows abundantly both in shoal, brackish water and in the sea, but it is the least valuable of sea weeds. The Rock-weed (Fucus vasiculosus) takes its common name from its strong attachment to rocks and boulders that are found on many parts of the coast. The Ribbon weed (Luminaria), also called Kelp, and the "mosses," so beautifully colored, grow in much deeper water, and are considered the best of all for dressing the land. These weeds are torn up from the bottom by the storms in winter and spring, and borne by the tides and winds in immense quantities to the shores, where they are stranded within reach of the farm er's teams.
