those set for some years, we not only prevent suffering for want of moisture during the dry weather in summer, but enable them to obtain those elements which they require for nourishment and growth. In selecting a material for mulch, one of a fibrous nature, or at least one that will not become compact after being beaten some by heavy rains, is always preferable to any other. The more plant food the material contains, the better, and for this reason coarse litter from the stable or barnyard has no superior for this purpose. Meadow hay may be ranked next in value, then straw, corn stalks, bog hay from low lands, and thence downward in the scale to pine or basswood shavings and sawdust. A very noted English arboriculturis says:- "Mulching consists in laying a circle of litter around newly-planted trees to retain the natural humidity of the soil," This is certainly a very brief and incomplete description of both the operation and the benefits to be derived therefrom. It is, however, about as much as has been claimed for it by treeplanters in this country, and for these and other reasons comparatively few persons think that mulching trees is sufficiently beneficial to pay for the cost of mater ial and its application. To say that the material applied as a mulch is merely "to retain the natural humidity of the soil' is certainly claiming very little for one of the most beneficial operations which the tree-planter can practice, especially in all hot and naturally dry climates, or in one like that existing throughout the

Special Crops for Poultry.

Every poultry breeder understands the value of having a variety of food, and that it is essential for the health of the fowls, and the production of fertile from which he can expect strong, healthy chickens. One can imagine the resul to a community who would try to live exclusively on corn; yet probably nin out of ten who raise poultry, think their duty done when they have scattered before them their quart of corn and gathered the eggs. This treatment may appear to fulfill all necessary obligations when fowls can have unrestricted range through the summer season, as Nature seems to provide means for sustaining life for feathered, as well as human tramps. The necessity of providing for winter food, is generally understood but if to these were added a supply of the other grains and vegetables of which fowls are fond, we would not hear so much complaint as now of stock "running out," and producing nothing but

As to the special grains, we may name buckwheat as one of the most valuable for the production of eggs. Sunflower seeds should also be included in the bill of fare of all well regulated poultry yards. The large amount of oil they contain seems to be especially valuable for young, growing chickens. Even when fed in large likeness of General Grant. Its great merit mantities, I have seen no bad effects is due to the fact that it is from General therefrom, as the husk or shell must be Grant's last ritting, prior to the final protaken with the meat. I made an experi- tration; that is, it presents him as a picture nent one winter with two flocks, one of of health just before the fatal disease com five pullets, and a cockerel of Plymouth Rocks, the other of twelve pullets, and Other pertraits, while they present him in a cock of Light Brahmas, these latter health, do not show his testures and generhaving a well appointed house, with all of sppearance at a late period. of the "modern improvements," sunlight, dust-bath, etc. The former were in a small coop about four feet square, with a covered run formed by throwing ornstalks on some poles, and standing ny hot-bed sash up against the south side. The reason This offer only good for /60 was that the first had the strippings from the cornstalks to help in the assimilation of their food, which the latter did not have. This proved, to my satisfaction, that some such coarse food must be provided if we would have the fowls thrive, and I may say here, that well cured green cornstalks, and young tender grass and clover, should be provided for poultry as regularly as hay for other stock.—R.
