Profit in Small Fruits near Large Cities-

Long experience has taught me that profit in growing small fruits for market lies in the direction of quality, not quantity. This certainly is true of the larger cities, and especially so of the New York market. There was a time when a strawberry was a strawberry, and customers had little ability to discriminate, but this period has passed away, General attention has been called to the fact that there are distinct varities of strawberries, as there are of apples, pears and grapes. Wm. Cullen Bryant, the poet, wrote an editorial for his paper, the Evening Post, years ago, wherein he invelghed against the Wilson type, declaring, in effect, that it was raised solely for the benefit of producers, because its hardness enabled it to enlure carriage, and that to the consumer t meant colic. I know of a fruit-grower who sent hundreds of bushels of this variety to New York in one week. After receiving his returns, he found that his mmense shipments had brought him a little in debt. One craft of fine berries would have yielded him a profit.

Now I would like to suggest to of plant food. OUR JUMBO is a fertilize growers whose eyes follow these lines, adapted for general application to all crops that they take a piece of ground and solls and solls and is sold for $25 per ton. yard manure—that from the cow-stable make it very rich. Bitter Milk-Cause and Prevention. There are several causes for bitter milk. The most prevalent is the presence of ragweed or other bitter weeds in the hay. This is almost always the case when rowen or aftermath hay is fed, and at times when corn folder from a weedy field is used. The flavor of ragweed is so persistent that it appears in the cream and butter and spoils the latter for use. This is to be expected, because the flavor of ragweed and other plants allied to it is due to an essential oil. which will naturally combine with the cream and remain in the butter. The flavor of it also affects the butter in the fall from cows pasturing in meadows, The only remedy for this defect is to trait of General Grant, executed by one of avoid the cause.
