FARMERS' COLUMN.

What is a Right-Handed Man? A right-handed man is a man who takes hold of a hoe, a rake, a spade or a fork, with the right hand down, and the left hand up, or nearest his body. A man who habitually puts his left hand down, or, for instance, the man who places his right on the top of a spade, and grasps the handle or shank with his left hand, is a left-handed man. And so with an axe. A right-handed and a left-handed man can work together in chopping down a tree. If they were both right-handed, or both left-handed, they could not do this, unless one choppedon one side of the tree, and the other on the other side. And so it is in leading earth or manure into a wagon. If the men stand face to face, one should be left-handed, and the other right-handed. In hoeing a row of corn, the righthanded man will walk on the left side of the row, while the left-handed man will walk on the right side of it. When two men together undertake to pitch hay upon a wagon in the field, one should be aleft-tandedman, and the other a right-handed man, and stand face to ace-otherwise they will make awkward work of. There are men who say they can use one hand as naturally as the other, but it is not common. As a rule, we think there are more left-handed men (in this sense), than right-handed men. In pitching bay or grain upon a wagon, the right-handed man will prefer to have the wagon drive so that the row of cocks or shocks shall stand on the left side of the wagon. 'The difference between a handy man on a farm, and an awkward one, is often due to a want of ready perception of the difference between the right hand and the left, as here described .- Am. Agricul-

Early Lambs for the Butcher. If you want early lambs, you must attend to the matter now. Twenty-two weeks is the average time. But it is necessary to select the ewes, and comnence to give better and more stimulating food, six menths before you wish the lambs. As a rule, you can get earlier lambs from ewes having more or less Merino blood in them, than from most the English breeds of mutton sheep. But even with these ewes, it is not always an easy mat er to get lambs in lanuary and February. It is safe to elect twice as many ewes as you wish o keep, for an early crop of lambs. There is no loss in this. You can disose of those not served, up to a given late, or keep them for a later crop. In or own experience, we have found no iniculty in lambing, even when we have ise! rams of the largest breeds, such as he Cotswold. The seize of the head, etween and about the eyes, has more o do with this matter, than the size of he body. In selecting a ram, avoid arge heads. Then if you can get a reed distinguished for early maturity, and rapid fattening qualities, the name s of no consequence. There are many uch breeds-South Down, Hampshire own, Shropshire Down, Oxford Down, eleester and Cotswold. You can not amiss. You want to select good, rifty, healthy, fully matured ewes, nd feed them well. And the sconer on commence to give them extra feed, ther the first of August, the better. A range of pasture, especially from gotd o better, and from better to best, is estrable. Give salt occasionally, and resh water every day. No matter how soil the pasture, provide some troughs, cal give each sheep a pound each, per ay, of oats, or peas, or beams, oil cake, r corn, until all the ewes are served -OSEPH HARRIS in Am. Agriculturist.

A Spanish Tale.

Don Truxillo, of Cantile was blessed with a beautiful daughter named Dolores. He was bent on compelling her to marry Senor D'Aracene; but the fair malden revolted, and the threat of her father was uttered that, if she did not yield to his commands, the convent of Santa Isabel would receive another votary. Delores yielded, but only to avoid the convent; and to D'Aracene she expressed herself as having no love or respect for him, and, when he sought to kiss her, with frantle strength she pushed him away, and, with flashing eyes and fierce speech, sald to him: "Senor D'Aracene, it is decreed than in two months' time I shall be your bride, and there's no other choice left me but a nun's cell. But mark me well; until the law binds us injone, no kiss of thine shall press my lips, no embrace of thine enfold me; I must be left as free as air, to enjoy, as best I may, the little time that remains to me ere I am bound in hated slavery. If I am not granted this I will find a way to escape thee, even if it be my death. Shall it be as I have anid9

> The days flew drearily yet swiftly on. One sunny afternoon she was seated in her father's garden, in a lovely spot, in a half-dreamy reverie, when suidenly she was startled by bearing a voice cry out to her tenderly and sof ly:

"Dolores! Dolores!" She started with a scream, and soon found berself in the outstretched arms of Valencio Respectfully announces to his customers and inten led marriage, and had hastened to her side to resene her from her dreadful fate. Their interview was that of ardent lovers, and listening to Valencio'. promises, she declared to him that if he would save her from that fatal marriage she would follow him even to the ends Pure Drugs & Medicines, of the earth. They agreed upon a meeting the next day, when she would fly with her lover away from her stern, reentless father.

The hour had arrived. Valencie apeared, having secured two horses saddled and bridled. They rode away to a neighboring pulre, and were united in wedlock. Then they departed with all possible speed away along the broad road, northward. As day dawned, they heard rapid hoof-beats after them, and easting a startled look behind, Doloresaw her father and D'Aracene pursuing but, alas, Dolores's horse stumbled and fell, and Valencio, unwilling to desert her, sprang to her assistance.

With rage and hate in their bosoms, ne pursuers overtook them, and the Don haughtily cried:

"Dolores, how is it I find thee, the plighted bride of Senor D'Aracene, here at this hour with a stranger?"

I shall ever know will be the senor by my side, and he now bids thee, as his bride elect, to quit the arms of yonder Central Carriage Works man, and seek his own." Valencio, clasping Dolores to his bosom, firmly declared her to be his wife, and beseeched Den Truxille to ske back his cruel woods, and let them lepart in peace.

The imperious Don, without a mo ment's hesitation, drew a pistol from ids belt and fired at the unfortunate youth, who fell at his bridg's feet a erpse, while she, half frenzied, knelt beside him. Coolly, he then gave orders o Senor D'Aracene to take back his scide; then, turning his horses, without ne glane at his distracted daughter, he ode away. The senor, dismounting, advanced to he side of the stricken girl, saying ently as he could:

"Senorita, this is but a sorry place for hee, and thy father has bidden me con-
