Fox Murting in the United States. The horse demanded by fox hunters, is rarely found among thoroughbreds, but by crossing thoroughbred sta llons upon stong, cold-blooded mares, after two or three crosses, an animal is produced which will carry a heavy man across the country, taking fences and ditches with ease, and keeping well up with the hounds. Thus we have the English hunter as an almost distinct breed of horses-not entirely distinct, however for there must be constant recufrence to the race horse, for courage, endurance and nerve, which can be perpetuated by and obtained from no other source.

Not only does fox hunting develop the highest qualities in these two races o our domestic animals, but its value it developing high qualities in man, is no to be underrated. In those countries where the young men of the higher classes are not given to such sports and pastimes as develop thoroughly their physical powers, the wealthier classes become effete and degenerate. Military exercises tend to overcome this, but effect comparatively few, while in Great Britain, the national sport of 'riding to hounds," makes men, not only of the sons of the poblity, but of thousands of y ung men and women whose wealth makes them independent of manua labor as a necessity.

To be a good horseman, or horse woman, for both sexes indulge in this sport, requires and induces health, vigor nerve, coolness, gool judgment, pluck and enthusiasm. These qualities, which cannot be too greatly valued, are devel oped in a high, perhaps in the highes degree, by fox hunting as practiced in almost all parts of Great Britain and Ireland, hence it is with pleasure that we see fox hunting according to the English rules and practice, rapidly grow ing in favor in this country. The fox imself, according to modern practice really plays an inconspicuous part. Were the hunt from the first to be a genuine one, in all those parts of the country where foxes are rare, or have been en tirely exterminated, as they have been from some limited sections, for example upon Long Island, N. Y., or upon the Island of Rhode Island (Newport), there would either be no sport, or if foxes were caught and brought thither, 'the hunt would be a very brief one, lacking interest in all important particulars. It is really very tame sport, in fact, no fun for any participants except the dogs, when the poor little fox is quickly run down, and set upon by a pack of fresh hounds. Hence a scent-bag is dragged across the country for several miles, so that both dogs and hunters are tolerably well blown, when suddenly Reynard who has been confined in a box, is liberated. He quickly takes in the situation, makes the best of his opportunitles to gain cover of some sort. The stght of him, and the fresh real scent, gives fresh vigor an 1 "tongue" to the pack. and excites the hunters, who now have a real object in view, to the exercise of all their skill. The "brush," or tail, becomes the reward of him or her, who first "in at the death," while th 'mask," or skin of the head, the "pads," er skin of the haunches, and the thu nutilated pelt, go to others, and so ends he fox hunt, unless, indeed, a grand upper and dance in the evening, be onsidered the real ending. -Am, Agri-Selecting the Milkers as Yearlings. The Scottish Agricultural Society, of he (o inty of Ayr, has a system of offering high prizes for yearling helfers, which prizes are not to be awarded until t ey come to milk and are then again pe med in competition. The young mimals, "quays," as the call them, are of course selected with care, and each brings a number of his most promising mes. They are marked and registered, and at the end of a year they, or a few of them-certainly a much reduced umber-meet again in the ring, and judgment is paseed. This system is worthy of imitation everywhere. It cultivates the ability to judge of the future value of a cow while still undeveloped; it makes milk an absolute test of merit; gives early development in nilk-giving its just weight, and honors the breeder's judgment, as well as his s till in breeding. Besides, it excites great interest, and is of great advantage to the show, on account of the numbers of young things brought out, and subjected to thorough scrutiny and comparison. Then there is just chance enough in it to give an added zest. No loubt, people would be found rush and inprincipled enough, to bet on their heifers, or on the more promising ones of a neighbor, or on the daughters of a favorite bull, and however wrong betting may be, it adds to the interest and profit of a show .- Am, Agriculturist.

The Little Bent Pin.

A LITTLE PAMILY STORY WITH VARIOUS ILLUSTRATIONS.

The parlor lamp shed its peaceful rays on a happy group of five persons. There was the head-of-the-family, and the one who called himself the head-of-the-famfly, their two daughters, aged respectively eighteen and eight, and a boy of eleven years. The father carefully removed a bent pin from the seat of the rocking chair, and stood holding it beween his thumb and fore-finger.

"My, son," he said pompously, "did you ever, when you saw a discarded, bent, little pin, pause and reflect how long it took to make it, and how many different hands contributed toward fashoning it as it was? It is an instructive and beneficial subject of contemplation. In the first place, there were the miners who dug the metal it is composed of; the men who transported it to the factories; the workmen who made the pins; the workmen who sharpened them; the men who packed them; the dealers who sold them to tradesmen; the men who carried them to the stores and the salesman who retailed them over the counter -tust think what an army of laborers handled that crooked little pin!" 'Yes,' said his son and heir reflective y, 'but you lest out a lot, pa.' 'How so?' asked the old gentleman n a tone of surprise.

'Well, there was the old lady who ought a paper of 'em; there was her legest daughter who took one to pin up the rip in the waist of her dress; the oung man who told them at the office that it was a cat that made that railroad map scratch on the back of his hand: the girl's little brother who borrowed ittle sister whose straw hat he took to keep his angle-worms in, and his old father who sat down on the bent pin when his little boy got tired of fishing.

They all bad a hand in it, too!" 'No,' said the old gentleman, as he brew the pin in the fire and took up his newspaper. 'You are drawing on your imagination, I never found a pin that went through such a series of experiences in my life.'

'May be you have'nt, but you will,' remarked his son and heir.

'No, no. Run out and play,' replied his father. I am going to sit in my - but before he sat down he noticed that his cldest daughter was mending a tear in her dress, while the little one was wiping the stain from a straw bat, so he pushed his arm-chair aside with a suspicious glauce at a gleaming point in the seat, and sank wearily on to the sofa. However, ere he had fairly touched its surface he bounded toward the zenith with a yell of anguish."

'The old man couldn't very well have helped finding it,' said the small boy to himself, as he stopped to regain his breath two blocks off, ',cause there was a pin in every blame piece of furniture in that room. My, but won't ma give it to him for swearing like that, though.' -Life.
