Salt in the Ration for Poultry. There is a prevalent notion that salt auses the feathers of fowls, or perhaps of the feathered tribes in general, to fall out. This, we believe, is well founded. Certainly, excess of this condiment should be avoided. There appears to be some connection between salt and feathers. Feather-eating fowls are often cured of the tendency by adding salt to their food, and a small quantity of mote, the production of the new crop of feathers at moulting time. This supposed effect may be simply the loosening of the old feathers. The result, as promotive of moulting, would be the same. Salt is a very important ingredient in the ration of pigeous, and where these birds are confined without it, they are never so thrifty. It is natural then, to conclude, that it is valuable in the food of other birds, and especially for barn-door fowls. The earlier old fowls are out of their moult and in full plumage, the sooner will they begin to lay, in the autumn. Pullets usually begin to lay as soon as they are completely plumed as adult fowls. It is worth while, therefore, to encourage moulting in every way, giving them exercise, tasect food, or fish in their ration, with ground bone, ground oyster shell, and sound grain. A tablespoonful of fine salt in the soft feed, given daily to a flock of twenty hens, will be a fair allowance. Fowls do not depend upon this for the salt which their bodies and feathers contain, for either the material itself, or the elements of which it is composed, exist to a greater or less extent in almost all the food they eat and the water they drink; and what we do by giving them salt is simply to increase the supply .- Am. A Portable Vat for a Sheep Dip. Sheep should be dipped twice a year. They suffer a great deal from vermin, which are destroyed by the dipping. After shearing, the ticks greatly annoy the lambs, upon which they gather from the shorn sheep, and prevent their growth. The lambs, at least, should be dipped, to free them from these pests, but it is well to dip the whole flock, as a safeguard against the prevalent scab, and other skin diseases. A very good lipping vat may be very readily made of one and a quarter inch tongue and grooved pine boards, put together at the joints with pitch, and is furnished with handles, by which it is moved from place to place. It may be six feet leng three feet wide, and three feet deep. The sloping ends have cleats nailed across them on the inside, by which the to are assisted to get out of the vat upon a draining floor placed to receive hem. The dip is made of one pound of coarse, strong tobacco, and one pound of sulphur, steeped in five gallons of bolling water. It is most effective when used at a temperature of one hundred and twenty degrees, and the sheep should be left in the dip long enough to have the wool saturated, and the skin well soaked by the fluid. A quantity of resh dip should be kept in a boller, to conew the old dip as it is diminished by

Games to the same thing, and if these breeds have only very contracted quarters, they will make the most of their limited prortunities. Asiaties, Dorking, the Trench breed, Plymouth Rocks, and numerous general purpose fowls, and the Pollsh, or top-knotted breeds generally, without exercise, will fatten up, stop laying, and become nearly, or quite carren, besides being exposed to cholera, and many other ills that rowls are liable to. Flocks of fowls among our neighbors, have recently suffered greatly from cholera. In almost every case that has been closely investigated, it was found that they were freely fed, several times a day, and either confined to small yards, or they were large fowls, disinclined to wander or forage about, except when hungry. The first symptom, was abdominal fat, then it was noticed that they staid long upon the roost in the sorning and went early to roost at evenng, and that egg-laying ceased; then cholera swept off nine-tenths of the flock. It is a good rule never to feed fowls unless they will run when called to be fed, and to stop throwing out grain the moment any of them cease to run after it. In Atch the summer time, once feeding daily, is
