The people of Pennsylvania think they are pretty well posted on buzzards. They, and the people all over the country, are pretty well acquainted with the Welsh Mountain Buzzard and the Buzzard has been the special object of the novel reading youngsters' ambition, and the local prayer meetings in that part of the Keystone State for several years.

THE FACT THAT when an elephant has the chills five gallons of rum and whiskey are prescribed, leads one to suspect that the elephant is a native of Kentucky.
—Love is blind, but matrimony is a great oculist.

the North Carolina forests. Of course one must go a few miles back from the railroad, but they are there, and the hunter who won't get the "buck fever" can have his search and his skill as a shot amply rewarded.
"Are you married?"
"Ye, indeed, I am, for a fact. I was married while I was a slave. My wife was a free woman—free before and when I run away they would let her come until Abraham Lincoln sent her a pass, 'cause they thought she had something to do with my going off. But, law law, she didn't know no more about it than that board that she didn't for a fact."

the weather here now is like a dream. The days are lovely. The breezes are balmy. The nights are pleasant. Frost has hardly touched even the exposed parts of the state. All people who are used to the severe changes and rigors of the colder North are in ecstasies of delight over our climate. Our soil is very productive and the Northern man who contemplates going South can do no better than to locate at Southern Pines.

Uncle George.
Uncle George Brown, a "re-tail dealer in coal," as he expresses it, on Plum street, between 5th and Longworth, is a familiar figure to all who have had business in that locality for the last twenty years. He is always happy and ready to talk to any one in regard to business, politics or religion. His place of business is in a cellar under a drug store, and here he manufactures kibble, which he sells now for 3 cents a bushel. "Used to go for 2 cents a bushel, but the hard times come. Can't do it no more, sah," said he. His coal he keeps in coffee-sacks, a bushel in each sack, and when he has a purchaser he shoulders a sack and delivers it at once. A Post reporter met him yesterday near his place of business and accosted him with: "Well, Uncle George, you are still at the old stand, I see."

"Thunder! you going to start a creamery, too?" he asked, as the man ordered a better ladies.
