cording to a Quebec correspondent of the Evening Post, have, ever since their enforced exile in the quaint old French-Canadian city, been pressing themselves into the set of society which centres around the garrison, the local Cabinet Ministers, and the Government officers. At first Eno merely sauntered around the rotunda of the Russell House; a year later he was occasionally to be seen at the Garrison Club, and now he is a regular habitue of the resorts patronized by the "best people." His formal debut into society, however, may be considered to date from last Wednesday evening, 20th ult., when he attended the annual ball of the Aurora Snowshoe Club. This is one of the social events of the season. Eno was accompanied by his wife, who was looked upon as one of the belles of the evening. She fairly glittered with diamonds. Among the notables present was Sir Adolph Caron, the Canadian War Minister, the dandy of the Cabinet, and the one peculiar Minister upon whom the Princess Louise, and, in fact, the ladies in general, have always bestowed their special favors. The Lieutenant-Governor, although he accepted an invitation, was not present, and it is said on good authority that his absence was owing to the fact of his Ade-de-Camp, Capt. Sheppard, having informed him of the presence of the American bank wrecker.
