Lime to Agriculture. Lime is a specially valuable agent in the French mode of farming. Inquiries have been instituted to poll, as it were, French agriculturists as to their views on that substance. Their replies have been summarized, as bearing on the physical and chemical action of time on soils. The explications of science are not quite satisfactory so far. Added to elay lands lime opens and renders them more friable, parmitting in dry seasons the noisture to ascend and bathe the parehed soil, while preventing fissures and all caking. Chemically, time induces does? in organic matters difficult to be alcomposed, transforming them into assimilable ool. Perhaps it facilitates the limitation of potash in clays. In the form of carbonate it favors the process of nitrification, but not so powerfully as in the sufphate state. Quick-lime acts contrarily A mixture of lime and manure is held by very many to be inmical, as it expels ammonia. But some remembering that azote exists in three states in manuro, and in that primarily of assimilable aftric acid, whose formation lime promotes such a gain is not to be ignored. Again line, according to competent authorities renders also phosprorie acid assimilable Swiss scientists hold line as necessary in the sell to induce the action of potash On peaty land time corrects acidity; In this case it should be applied in the quick form. For meadow top-dressing lime must ever be applied in the compost state If farm-yard manure be added the earth and time ingredients are mixed apart some time previously. The pasturages of Normandy attest the excellency of this fertillizing agent. In the case of

OUS AND RICH VEGETABLE. Those who harvested their parsaip in the autumn, under the impression tha they are in full perfection for the table labor under a great mistake; and these who gather a portion of them, with the idea that they can not be dog in the winter, are also mistaken. A friend of ours who keeps abreast, if not in advance of the times, has adopted a method of so protecting his parsnips in autumy that they can be dug at any time de ing the vinter and thus have them fresh as well as well riponed. His method is to cover the ground where the paranips grow with a sufficient covering of col-grass to keep Southern Pines Health Rosort. the frest out. Out. The cost of covering a sufficient out. The cost of covering a sufficient quantity for family use would be very slight, and the advantage of being able to brain fresh parsnips at any time very great. Whenever the frost has been our the ground in January or February, w have always availed ourselves of the opportunity to dig a few parsnips, and have found them to be much more delicious then when dry in autumn. Although we have never tried the procesof covering, we have no doubt that i will secure roots of a much better flavor than if dug either in the autumn or the spring, for when dug in the autumn the oots do not arrive to perfection, and if not dog until spring the tops begin to grow, and the fibrous roots start up frenently before the frost is out at the ottom of the roots; but we can readily e that when well covered the roots will kept back, and thus be in good conition much later in the spring than i of covered; and there can be lon Butloubt that by the keeping of the roots is the ground undisturbed, and so protected that there will be no feering and than ug, the flavor will be better than if le t xposed to the sadden and great change of temperature that are constantly taking place in our climate. When covering ntended it would be better to plant th parsnips in a spoace bed and not in ingle row, because it would be much asier to cover a square than one row, i not requiring to much material to cover with. The parsnip, when preperly grown and well ripened, is an excellen vegetable, but for the want of the proper
