The most important feature of this delayed report is that in reference to the losses in wages by the strikes of that year. The whole number of employes on strike or locked out during the year was estimated at 228,138. Statistics were collected which show that 64,779 of these lost in wages during their idleness $ii., 711,007, or an average of $67 each. Assuming this to be a fair average for the entire number, the total loss of wages sunding this to be a fair average for the entire number, the total loss of wages for the year was $13,003,805. This is one of the features of the strike business that strke leaders are very careful to keep out of sight of their followers as much as possible. The wages lost during the weeks or months that men engage in strikes are a total loss and are never made up by anybody. The partial support obtained from others who are working is only taken out of the wages carned by somebody clae and is a part of the total loss.
