A Young Man Shoots Himself.

Robert Schnurman, aged 24, of Allentown shot himself in the head Friday evening and will probably die. He had wasted a nice inheritance and was pretty well used up physically. Lately he had become despondent and frequently threatened to kill himself. His friends tried to cheer him up and at times he seemed to have dismissed all idea of suicide. About seven o'clock Friday evening he told a friend he would shoot himself and hastily left the house and entered a saloon on South Seventh street, walked behind the counter, pulled out a drawer in which was a revolver and taking the weapon entered an adjoining room and shot himself in the head. The bullet was of 32-calibre and is still imbedded in the head. At last accounts he was in a critical condition at the house of his grandmother.

Death of Ephraim Grim, of Allentown.

Ephraim Grim, one of the wealthiest and most widely known citizens of Allentown, died Monday morning of peritonitis, after a brief illness. He was born in 1819 and since he was twenty years of age had been engaged in the mercantile business. He was also largely interested in numerous local enterprises and was connected with banking, insurance and other institutions. For twelve years he was treasurer of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society and was one of the incorporators of the Allentown Bank. He was the first person in Allentown to subscribe for telegraph stock, which was shortly after the early lines were put in operation. In politics he was a Republican and for several years was chairman of the county committee and president of the Lincoln Club. He leaves a widow and two children. His father is the oldest resident of Allentown and is nearly ninety-two.

In Memoriam.

Henry Boyer, Esq., son of Henry and Magdalene Boyer, and brother of Joseph and Reuben Boyer, died at his home in Weissport, on May 24th, in his 65th year. 'Squire Boyer was a MAN in all the different relations of life. He was a good husband, was interested in the welfare of his family; a kind and indulgent father, who loved his children, who walked before them with good advice and example; an officer of the law who communicated wise counsel and judgment to all who sought either, helping many a one out of serious difficulties. He was a communicant and church-going member of the Reformed church, at Weissport. He knew the justice of civil law, and he also knew and experienced the law of GRACE, the royal law of liberty. The truth made him free in the Son. His Master called him higher. His hands are folded. He rests. Pax Vobiscum.

Rest in peace, our father dead,
In thy dark and narrow bed;
You lived in hope—within God's care,
Then met your Master in the air.

Rest in peace our father dear,
Sleep the sleep that knows no fear;
Rest in peace—in Jesus' love
Till we meet in Heaven above.

His Pastor, J. E. F.

"A Rare Treat"

We wish to reiterate what we said last week, "A Rare Treat," because we know whereof we speak. For as the training and exercises of Miss Major progress, develope and unfold, their excellencies and rarity become rich, in extremis, far exceeding anything of the kind ever presented heretofore to our freely patronizing and highly appreciative community. Not that the exercises are in common with those presented by our schools, lodges, and individuals, but on account of their unique character, their wonderful oddity and the enraptured attention they attract, holding all spell-bound, in fact, they are sui generis—of their own peculiar kind. Miss Major, with a desire to give the public something excellent, has secured the services of two very estimable and talented young ladies from abroad, which with the best talent of our own neighborhood, will do ample justice in catering to the cultivated taste of the public. But why should we waste words and occupy the editor's valuable space, when everybody will have an opportunity to see for themselves. To the incredulous, we would say, come without fail, so as to avoid any after regrets. The affair of last week was good, and scores another point, proving that Mrs. Clara Bower, is a decided success, and deserved her well patronized entertainments. And the Chautauqua Society, our young and middle-aged men and women of higher literature—the literatu of Lehighton, also delightfully entertained our public. It was not a mutual admiration society, but mutual knowledge acquiring Chautauquains, who so successfully and gratuitously dispensed what they had acquired, to a crowded and overflowing house last Saturday evening. It was a success, and for the benefit of the public, may it oft be repeated. And there is no doubt, but what the "Social Glass" will likewise satisfy the public taste. We expect a good rendering of the same. Some there are who say the social glass is always good. But "A Rare Treat" all will say was charming, enrapturing. But we must stop, there may be some more to say next week. So do not forget, June 12th, and see for yourself.

The Slatington Grays and the Lehighton Nine Cross Bats on Decoration Day, and the Home Team Wins.

On last Saturday afternoon about 700 people assembled on the old fair grounds, corner of Northampton and Elm streets, this borough, to see the game of ball between the Slatington Grays and the Lehighton Nine. At 3:20 p. m. both clubs, the members of which were nicely uniformed, got on the grounds; time was called, and the visiting club took the field. After some hard playing the home nine scored one run in the first inning and managed, very nicely, to give the Grays three goose eggs in succession. Up to the fifth inning, as will be seen by the score appended, the game was very closely contested and excitement ran high; but in the sixth inning our boys scored seven runs to the Grays' one, and from then on the game was in the hands of the Lehighton Nine. Brinkman backed Koons behind the bat exceedingly well, and was the object of frequent applause; "Blackie" carried off a laurel by catching a "fly" which was spinning along through centre field. The other members of the club did equally as good work and deserve to be complimented for the manner in which they acquitted themselves. The game was one of the most peaceable that ever took place on the grounds, and the verdict of the people was, that the members of the Slatington Grays were gentlemen. The members of the visiting team played well; they are an active set of young men, and no doubt when they get a little more practice will give many clubs in the valley a tussel. Our home team is improving rapidly, and any club that tackles them will have to fight a hard battle to carry off the honors.

Decoration Day.

This was a day that we will not so soon forget. All were happy. All were interested. The Sons of Veterans led the grand procession. When all the soldiers, your fathers, are gone to rest in the camp until another bugle shall call them and us hence, it will be your lot to decorate their graves and the graves of those who fell in battle.

All honor is due to the John D. Bertolette Post, G. A. R., for their interest manifested so as to enthuse others to join their ranks in paying tribute due to the soldier of our late civil war in that they died for us and our country.

The Teutonia Society marched in the procession, to show to us that in their hearts flows the blood of liberty, warm for those especially who sacrificed their lives for truth, freedom and country.

The Gnaden Huetten Lodge I. O. O. F., always in sympathy with sufferers and ready to link themselves with those who uphold love, friendship and truth, came out from their secluded encampment to pay their warmest regard to the soldier living and dead.

The Knights of Honor said with one accord in tones and words muttered, "Honor to whom honor is due." Regard for others is one of the grandest principles of human life. It touches the very threshold of divine life.

The Weissport and Parryville Camps of the P. O. S. of A., paid their respects to those who were patriotic in going to the front, willing to die for their country. Not only was the civil war waged to free the slave but to unify and preserve the social, the educational and business interests of our country. As much as I can learn this order heartily endorses the common school system of education and is always ready to defend the same. Honor to the soldier; he fought for this boon.

Three ministers from Lehighton and two from Weissport each brought their flower to the memory and bravery of the soldier. These pointed the army to the march toward the grave, to the roll-call from Heaven, to the Grand General and Captain of our Salvation, and to the Grand Review in the latter day.

Sunday Schools from Lehighton and Weissport joined the procession that they might learn to revere and honor the soldier after reaching riper years. A general, good, and noble feeling was manifested by all—by sister towns, by organizations and orders, by ministers and Sunday Schools—all pervaded by one spirit—to feel for and pay honor to the noble soldiers of our country.

MEMORIAL DAY IN LEHIGHTON.

How it was Observed.

The sun rose with unclouded brilliancy on Memorial Day, and as its first beams loomed above the horizon, dispelling the mists of morn, it shed its scintillating rays upon a grateful and happy people. In honor of this great holiday a number of business places and private residences were nicely decorated with flags and bunting. A large number of people from the surrounding towns and villages kept coming in all through the day, and all told, it was a joyful day of thanksgiving and praise.

In the morning a detachment of John D. Bertolette, Post 484, G. A. R., were despatched to Parryville with the commission of strewing with flowers the graves of the fallen "boys in blue," who are sleeping their last long sleep in the cemetery at that place.

At about half-past twelve o'clock the different lodges, Sunday schools, &c., who were to take part in the demonstration, commenced to gather around the corner of Bank and Iron streets, and impatiently awaited the orders to move. At a little after one o'clock the procession formed with

Sons of Veterans,
Arion Cornet Band,
Speakers in carriages,
Knights of Honor,
Wagons with Goddess of Liberty, &c.,
John D. Bertolette Post, G. A. R.,
Teutonia Society,
Gnaden Huetten Lodge, I. O. O. F.,
Bowmanstown Cornet Band,
Weissport Camp, P. O. S. of A.,
Parryville Camp, P. O. S. of A.,
Lehighton Drum Corps,
I. O. of G. T.
M. E. Sunday School,
Reformed Sunday School,
Packerton Drum Corps,
Evangelical Sunday School,
Lutheran Sunday School,
Weissport Union Sunday School,
Weissport Evangelical Sunday School,

and moved up Bank street to intersection of Lehigh, down Lehigh street to Elm, out Elm street to the cemetery, where the graves, of those who responded to their country's call in her great time of need, lie buried, and strewed with flowers as a token of the honor and esteem in which they are now held. The exercises in the cemetery were very impressive. Opening prayer by Rev. Wm. Major; singing by the Sunday schools; address by Rev. G. W. Gross; address in German by Rev. G. W. Stibitz; concluding with a very beautiful prayer by Rev. J. H. Kuder.

The procession then re-formed and moved down Elm street to Bank street, down Bank street to intersection of Bankway, down Bankway to Weissport, where a firing squad and committee of decoration were detached and ordered to the Weissport cemetery, where the work of honoring our noble dead was proceeded with. The procession after moving through Weissport halted at the Public Square, where the ceremonies were opened by Rev. W. C. Weiss; singing by the Sunday schools; address by Rev. Egge; and prayer by Rev. G. W. Stibitz. At the conclusion of the exercises the Lehighton portion of the procession re-formed and moved back to Bank street where they were dismissed.

The following is a synopsis of the address delivered by Rev. G. W. Gross:

FRIENDS, FELLOW CITIZENS AND COMRADES: Scenes and occasions like these bring with them vivid recollections of the past, recollections of those dark days and trying scenes when a thrilling page of our country's history was written in blood; scenes in which you, as comrades of the late war, have had an active part, and in which you as civilians have had, and felt, deep, personal interest. We unite to-day in honoring the memory of those brave ones, who sacrificed life for the sake of a cause they deemed just and sacred. While we plant fresh flowers on their graves, and recall their valiant deeds, let us devoutly pray for a new and more powerful baptism of patriotic sentiment and life, that the coming generation may lift higher the standard of civic life and righteousness, and battle manfully and successfully for the speedy and universal reign of liberty, and peace, and godliness among the Nations of the earth. War, at best, is a necessary evil, it is invariably cruel, and can never be refined. It can be justified in any instance only on the ground of the righteousness of the cause for which it is waged. The best results of war are the triumph of right, and the prosperity resulting from this triumph, a blessing which might never have been realized but for the strife of battle. Our heroes, both living and dead, endured with heroic fortitude, and achieved for us a glorious peace. The dead rest from their warfare, but their works have wrought out for them an honorable memorial of the nation's gratitude, and for us the blessings of concord. The living gather the fruits of their sacrifice, and join in grateful tributes of their memory. As a nation we have entered into the blessings achieved by internecine warfare. "By terrible acts of righteousness" God has wrought out a glorious deliverance. The weapons of carnage have been converted into implements of national comity and advancement. Agriculture and commerce, manufacture and inter-railway systems; art and science, education and religion have flourished everywhere, because war has conquered the elements of strife and bitterness, and infused a spirit of concord and unity. And all this as the fruit under God, of the devotion and sacrifice of the nation's heroes whose memory we honor to-day, long may their memory be cherished. Let due praise be given to the Prince of Peace. The characteristics of the day are Appreciation, Generosity, and a Spirit of Forgiveness. Who can be better able to appreciate the value and cost of our liberty, peace and prosperity as a nation, than you my comrades of the late war, you, who stood shoulder to shoulder in many a long fierce conflict, you, who sacrificed the comforts of home and endured the miseries of camp-life, together with long and wearysome marches. The horrors of a battle field can be fully known only by experience. Our historians may paint the events in the most glowing colors, and our children may with pride read of the bravery and endurance of the soldier, but he alone who has stood facing the enemy in the struggle, and heard and felt the force of his blows, and has seen his comrades mown down by his side and has heard his dying groans, can form a true idea of war. One of the most deplorable features of the war was the cruel treatment of our prisoners at the hands of the enemy. Soon after the great struggle began we looked behind the army of white rebels, and saw 4,000,000 of black people condemned to toil as slaves for our enemies. They did effective service under Gen'l. Spade and we did well to extend a helping hand to them in their desire for liberty. We have seen white men betray the flag and fight to kill the Union, but in all that long, dreary war we never saw a traitor in a black skin. Our prisoners escaping from the starvation of prison, fleeing to our lines by the light of the North star, never feared to enter the black man's cabin and ask for bread. You, my comrades, can not too highly appreciate the blood-bought boon of liberty, but you can well afford to be generous to the vanquished foe. You well know our opponents were no cowards, and I do not think it would be a compliment to you to consider them as such. I venture to say, if there was a grave of a fallen foe within our reach to-day we would not pass it by without dropping a flower upon it, as an assurance that we have forgiven the wrong and wish for a continuance of peace and godliness among all mankind.

Three Fatal Accidents.

Three fatal accidents occurred Saturday down the Lehigh Valley, one Geo. Louder, of Hokendauqua, while walking on the Lehigh Valley tracks stepped out of the way of one train and was run down by an express, dying instantly. A wife and several children survive him.

After quitting work the men in the West Bangor quarry began ascending to the top. Peter Stocker had nearly reached the top of the ladder when he lost his hold and fell to the bottom, 150 feet. He was dead before friends reached him.

While playing along the Lehigh river Willie Arndt, son of William Arndt, fell into deep water and was drowned. His body was recovered soon after.

Lesson 10. June 6th,

JESUS THE BREAD OF LIFE.

John 6. 22-40. Golden Text John 6. 31. Time, April, A. D. 29. Place, Capernaum.

The morning dawned upon a scene of rich-hued beauty. The green, grassy slopes, the Sea of Galilee, ruffled with the storm of the preceding night, and here and there on the hill side groups of people who had slept in the open air. A few boats were at the beach, and the people hastened to enquire where He was who so miraculously fed them the day before. Finding that He had gone they also took ship and went back to Capernaum, where they found Christ on his way to the synagogue. They opened the conversation with an inquiry as to His return to Capernaum, but the Master, who read their hearts, passed their question by, and at once spoke to them of the real desire of their harts. They were expecting a Messiah who would be a great military leader, and who would revive their national glory and bring them into a condition of ease and plenty. They shared the common feeling in this regard, and the miraculous feeding of the day before was an incentive to them to expect still better things in the future. Christ knew their desires and their designs, and He told them to seek the Bread of Life, which would supply their every need and without which they could never enter into His spiritual kingdom. They had their preconceived notions of the Messiah and were unable to understand His teachings, and supposed He referred to some special works which they must perform. "What shall we do," they asked. A voice from the crowd—probably some Rabbi who was present and wished to entrap Him—demanded a sign, and reminded Christ that Moses gave manna from heaven to the children of Israel. This striking event in the life of Moses had made a deep impression upon the Jewish mind. With the years it had grown in force and intensity, until the people half deified Moses, and ascribed wonderful powers to him. It was taught that as Moses was the first savior of the people and gave them manna, so the second Savior, the Messiah, would also give them manna from heaven. Hence when Christ spoke of Himself as the Bread of Life, He was promptly asked for this special sign which the Jews had been taught to expect. No doubt the mocking questioner expected to demolish the claims of Jesus at once, but His answers so satisfied many of them that they cried, "Lord, evermore give us this bread." And then He taught them the beautiful truth that all who believe on Him shall thus eat of the Bread of Life and drink of the living water which shall ensure them everlasting life. These metaphors would have been easily understood by them if they had not been blinded by their preconceived notions of the Messiah. "Eating" was a common figurative expression for devouring the words of the law. One of their popular sayings was, "In the time of the Messiah the Israelites will be fed by Him." On this occasion Jesus adopted the usual figurative language to which they had been accustomed and taught the world that in Him we have spiritual life.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

1. Leave the husks of the world and feed on the truths of Jesus.
2. Satisfy the soul's hunger by believing in Christ.
3. Seek Jesus not for personal gain, but spiritual life.
4. God in Christ is the Giver of eternal life.
