There was a remedy in the medicine chest, but it was a full hour before the pain was relieved. Then I began to feel sleepy, and I bunked down and was oon fast asleep. At about noon, after a nap of two hours, I was awakened by the sound of a buman voice.

"Say, you!" I opened my eyes to find a white renegade standing over me, holding one of my revolvers in his hand. "Git up!"

I sat up. All our goods in camp had een packed up and taken away. The man who confronted me was the wickedest looking fellow we had seen in the swamps. His bair and whiskers were so long and unkempt that little of his teeth could be seen. His clothing was part cloth and part skins, and it was me, and deemed it wiser to settle back plain that he had avoided civilization for years.

The woman then said something to the children in their own mongre dialect, and both of them sat down facing me, and only three or four feet away. Then man and wife cast off the rope, seized long poles, and presently the boat moved slowly down the lake to the north.
