This feeling was manifest when they pathered in the opper room. They had no servants to remaye their smilals and wash their febt on enterang accreting to the costom of the country, and it, was obviously the that of one of the disciples to perform this mental daty for the others.

They disputed about this, however, as they did about who should have the best places at the table, nearest the Minter.

Thus they redined on their coshlors.

at the table with feet unwasied. Account took advantage of the opportunity to teach them a lesson in huntitry which they would not forget, tierose from His couch, divisted film-self of His cuter garments, took a towel, hadn and water and processled to wash the feet of His disciples.

Peter effected rothis, in his impetoors way; but when he found that it was nec-cessary fort hist's purpose, he said, "Lord, not my feet only but also my hands and my head?" The answer is important, "Jesus suith to him, He that is washed (bathed) neceigth not save to west his (buthed) needeth not save to wash his teet, but is clean every white and ye are clean, but not all."

elean, but not all."

He meant, that he who had been to the bath only needed to wash his feet on returning to the house, to cleanse them of the dust gathered up by the way.

The Greek word tollownexos from novo, translated "washes!" in the old version, is "bathed! in the Rev. Verathus giving it its moner meaning.

thus giving it its proper meaning.
The Greek word ximastrial, from Nirro, is translated "wash" (his toot) in both versions, and simply means to wash the feet or hands.

But this symbolical net typified the cleansing from sim and honer. He said,
"Ye are clean, but not all," thus refer-ting to Judas, who should be ray Him.
The main beson thought is famility.
The disciples contended for honor, prefer-The distribles contended for larnor, prefer-ment and place. Christ performed the effice of a servant for them and thus shared them that true hemility was more in harmony with the principles of Hi-new Kirgdom. "For I have given you an example," He says. Let us follow that example, not in letter, but in spirit, so that we may have a "part with" Him.

LESSON THOUGHTS, Humble yourself before God.
 Let your life reflect the humility xemplified in Christ's life. 3. Be content to work for Jesus in the humblest sphere, if necessary,
4. Let the love of Christ constrain you
