

ENTERED AT THE LEIGHTON POST-OFFICE AS SECOND CLASS MAIL MATTER.

We have met the enemy and—well, we are theirs.

The labor vote did it with a vengeance—but all the other way.

As a matter of Justice Black's vindication will be next in order.

It is a question whether Blaine's magnetism or the tariff slip did it.

It is safe to presume that Chairman Hensel is not quite so sanguine.

It seems to be generally understood that Beaver has been fully vindicated.

The mythical promise has beaten the campaign liar without apparent effort.

If not too premature, we would remark that there will be another election in 1887.

The Jeffersonian idea of simplicity does not seem to take very well in Pennsylvania.

We would remark that, as usual, the unpresuming little "sicker" had its legitimate effect.

The blackest cloud of times has a silver lining—who knows but what Black will some day be vindicated.

HENRY GEORGE, of New York City, was buried under Hewitt votes, but 'tis said that "the dead shall rise again."

RAIDENBUSH'S twelve hundred majority would lead us to conjecture that probably somebody voted last Tuesday.

Of course Beaver will at once refute the base insinuation that the members of the Legislature will have their salaries paid in "store order coupons."

WILLIAM M. RAPSHER has been elected District Attorney by the Carbon county Democracy. Mr. Rapsler is an intelligent and capable gentleman, well versed in the spirit of the law, and it is safe to say that he will dispose of the business connected with that office with credit to himself and the people of the county generally.

It is a fact, self evident, that when a Lehighman is to be voted for, his fellow citizens throw off the bigotries of partisanship and remember him in no unkind manner. Mr. Raidenbush's majority last Tuesday was indicative of the high regard in which he is held by our people—Democrats and Republicans—and shows that when party jealousies are cast aside man is appreciated in his true worth.

THE estimates of the expenses of the postal service for the next fiscal year aggregate $56,342,150, while the appropriations for the current year were $54,365,563, showing an increase in the estimates for the next year of $970,282. The total estimated revenue is $50,612,595. The estimated expense of maintaining the Post Office Department, including clerks' salaries, depositions and contingent expense, is $228,206, a reduction of $2,150 from this year's appropriations.

THE attention of our monied men is directed to a communication in another column of to-day's issue on the water question. The advisability and practicability of an artesian well is legitimately shown and should command the attention of our citizens. We understand that about $40,000 has been subscribed thus far towards the project,—an additional $40,000 or $100,000 would solve the water question. Capitalists from adjoining towns are invited to come and invest with us. Step up, gentlemen, and keep the ball rolling.

GOVERNOR BRAVER'S intelligence should prevent him from following in the footsteps of his Republican friend ex-Governor Hoyt. General Beaver was a gallant soldier and we believe that if he follows his own convictions in his official capacity he will be an honor to the office, to the State and people. It is in his power to make or unmake himself. What will he do? If he avoids the machinery that characterized his nomination, and is sincere in his efforts in disposing of State affairs he will be judged accordingly by a generous commonwealth; failure to do so will bring upon him the just censure of a people, as willing to condemn right as to condemn wrong.

ANGER AHEAD. Felix Adler spoke Sunday in Chickering Hall, New York, on the subject, "Is there danger of a conflict between classes?" Among other things he said: "I see a signal danger in the present aspect of the labor movement. I do not blame workmen for making a beginning in the political labor movement, but I do not think that movement should be restricted entirely from one class. Nor do I believe their best and most trusted leaders are animated by class bias. I believe they are working for the good of the commonwealth. If one class is attacked by chronic discontent the whole body is sick. There come occasional growls from laborers, some of whom are mischievous spirits, longing to wreak vengeance by themselves becoming oppressors of their oppressors. Let this virus spread, what are we to do? We are ourselves to blame that it exists. I answer, the labor question should not be permitted to remain solely the business of laborers to solve. You should not let the laborer feel that he is alone. Join his forces and help him solve the question. The main thing is to take away working people's impression that they are alone. We must do mission work among them. Every employer who treats his employees fairly is a missionary. It is true that employees are often tyrannous and exacting in using their new found power, yet a fair employer commands the respect of his men. This personal relation is a bond and a bridge, and he who cultivates this bond deserves well of his country. The movement of which we now see the beginning is the vanguard of a movement which will become in the end a far-reaching triumph.

THE "MOVING" PROCLAMATION.

The following is President Cleveland's proclamation designating Thursday, Nov. 25, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer:

It has long been the custom of the people of the United States, on a day in each year especially set apart for that purpose by their Chief Executive, to acknowledge the goodness and mercy of God, and to invoke His continued care and protection. In observance of such custom, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November instant, to be observed and kept as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

On that day let all our people forego their accustomed employments, and assemble in their usual places of worship, to give thanks to the Father of the Universe for our continued enjoyment of the blessings of a free government, for a renewal of business prosperity throughout the land, for the returns which have rewarded the labor of those who till the soil, and for our progress as a people in all that makes a nation great.

And while we contemplate the infinite power of God in earthquake, flood and storm, let the grateful hearts of those who are shielded from harm through His mercy, be turned in sympathy and kindness toward those who have suffered through His visitations. Let us also in the midst of our thanksgiving remember the poor and needy with cheerful gifts and aims, so that our service may, by deeds of charity, be made acceptable in the sight of the Lord.

PATTON'S PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, According to a time-honored custom a day is set apart by proclamation for general acknowledgment of God, from whom all blessings flow, for the mercies and immunities he has granted to us, the President of the United States, I, Grover Cleveland, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November, to be observed and kept as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

While we remember with a sincere and practical sympathy our fellow-citizens who have been called to suffer through the afflictive visitations of Providence within our own State and throughout the Union, let us show our gratitude to Almighty God for whatever exemption from the sorrows of life we have enjoyed and for the liberal yield of the precious fruits of the earth, the integrity of our free institutions, the progress of education and religion, and the revival of business interests and the general happiness of the people; let us remember thanksgiving to Him and pray for the continuance of the same.

"Thus shall keep the feast, which is the day of the year when they have gathered in thy labors from the field."

Broadbrim's New York Letter

Special to the Carbon Advocate.

We thought that the birth of Miss Liberty a couple of years ago was a big thing, a very big thing, but it was nothing at all to the christening of this week. At that time there was not a great deal to enthuse about. Everything was in the future, and it is not an easy task to get up a furor about a hole in the ground; but we did; we got up quite a procession; we made the earth shake with the thunder of our guns, and we sent our French brothers home rejoicing. But the celebration of this week was a very different affair. Here we had Liberty herself on a good solid stone foundation, her torch towering up to the heavens, so that no man can say her light is hid under a bushel. I have watched the completion of this magnificent lady with considerable solicitude. I saw a section of the mighty arm at our Centennial ten years ago, two years later, in France, I gazed with awe and reverence on the magnificent head.

Later still, I used to take a morning stroll about the hand that stood in Madison square, and as I gazed upon its tremendous proportions, imagined that I would be "climbing up the golden stairs" long before it was finally completed. But here I stand in front of it, thousands upon thousands of me, on land and on sea, the heavens ring with their shouts, the earth trembles with the thunder of their guns, the sky is ablaze with many colored fires, and "Liberty Enlightening the World" is an accomplished fact and the heritage of countless generations yet unborn. What a lesson of persistent effort. When Moses, Barthold presented this splendid gift to the people of the United States hardly a representative man could be found to return thanks for the imperial gift. Effort after effort had been made to furnish a foundation for the statue, but the ancient fossils who had taken charge of the matter and who belonged to the Silurian age, evidently expected that the foundation would be finished A.D. 1880. But the "Hand of the World" took it up and the result was $100,000 hard cash, while the ancient committee was busy drafting a set of resolutions calling the attention of the people of the United States to the matter. It is useless after all the great dailies have exhausted themselves to attempt to give anything like a description of the celebration. We have had many great days in New York when the city let itself loose for a holiday. When Croton Water was brought, in it was considered such a blessing that the city with one accord gave itself up to rejoicing and the result was one of the most brilliant and enthusiastic festivals ever seen on the continent. When the nighty cable under the sea linked the old world and the new in fraternal embrace, once more the city dinned its holiday robes, and old men whose memories ran back almost to the Revolution declared that they remembered nothing like the cable celebration. Miss Liberty celebration eclipsed them all and may be classed as among the grand events of the century. While the military parade has often been equalled and frequently surpassed nothing like the naval parade has ever been seen in this country. Payne, the pyrotechnist of the Crystal Palace of London, had charge of the fireworks and it is doubtful if the present generation will ever again see its equal. The celebration was a grand success and will be classed among the notable events of the century.

There is an exhibition in Brooklyn, a short distance from the end of the big bridge, one of the grandest works of art ever exhibited in the world. It is Philpott's cyclorama of the battle of Gettysburg. As an exhibition nothing has been seen like it on the continent. To the artist it is a miracle; to the lover of nature an inspiration; to the student of history a living fact; to the soldier a perfect realization of the tremendous struggle through which he passed; to the boys who are to be the future rulers of this land, no history like this. There is more to be learned by looking on this magnificent work for an hour than in the study of history for years. Wonderful and almost beyond description is the work of the artist. You cannot realize that you stand in a space of less than two hundred feet and that not forty feet above you is the roof of the building. As you stand gazing into the distance you lose all sense of time and space. Over your head is the calm, warm summer sky, miles away in the green vistas of that beautiful valley made immortal by the most tremendous battle of the century, and almost at your feet are thousands locked in the embrace of death, which made Pickett's desperate charge one of the most terrible and memorable of the war. The nation owes a debt of gratitude to Mons. Philpott's which it will find difficult to discharge. He is not to be regarded as a mere artist only, but as a great teacher whose works entitle him to the gratitude of mankind.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1, 1886. Mr. Editor: The Capitol is just now undergoing the annual house-cleaning process to which it is subjected during the few weeks preceding the opening of a session of Congress. Workmen are engaged throughout the building in painting and cleaning, carpets are being laid and desks placed in position. Nor is the scene of activity confined to the interior of the building. Work upon the marble terraces upon the west front of the building is being prosecuted by an army of workmen, and ground has been broken for the grand stair-case provided for by Congress at its last session.

The plans for the Mexican legation building have been returned, approved from the City of Mexico, and the work of tearing down the houses which cover the site has been commenced. The building, when completed, will be three stories in height, and have a frontage of 42 feet. It will be constructed of stone and brick, and when finished it will be one of the finest buildings in the city. It will be located in the heart of the social center of the city, and in the immediate neighborhood are the fine residences of ex-Secretary Chandler, Mr. John W. Thompson, Chief Justice Waite and the late Chief Justice, the former minister to Spain. The action of the Mexican Government in thus erecting a legation building, will, it is thought, induce other foreign governments to secure building sites, improve the value of property, and advance the interests of the United States.

An illustration of the power of the pen has been given by the recent change of the title of the President's country residence. The new title of "Red Top" originated with Colonel Wood of the Washington staff of the President, and was first used in a discussion of the title "Pretty Prospect," which had been given to his new home by the President, the Herald man entered his protest against the title. He insisted that as the roof had been painted a blood red color that "Red Top" should be its name, and he laid a wager of a dinner that he would make it so. He wrote an article in his paper calling the place "Red Top," and the name was at once adopted by all of the papers and the public generally and he won his wager.

The National Museum has received some very valuable and interesting exhibits during the past few days from Africa and other foreign countries. Among them may be mentioned a ring of brass, weighing ten pounds, which has given the ankle of an African prince as an ornament. Professor Hendley, the modeler of the museum, shows some marvelous productions in plaster, having given him the title of the "Wizard." It is now engaged upon the figure of Geronimo, the Apache chief. The work, although copied from a photograph, will, when finished, be a life-like representation of the notorious Indian outlaw, and will form a very interesting addition to the collections of the museum.

The committee engaged in perfecting the arrangements for the grand national competitive drill, to be held in Washington in May next, report that upwards of $40,000 has been expended in defraying the expense of the project. It is considered an assured success. Military companies from nearly every State in the Union have responded to the intention of competing for the prizes. During the eight days of the meeting the various military organizations will compete for the prizes, and the Washington Monument will be the scene of the grandest military display since the war.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Alexander T. Stewart, the wife of the great dry goods millionaire, will be held on Thursday, the 11th inst., at 10 o'clock, at the residence of her son, Mr. Stewart, at 10th and M streets. life, and whatever we know of him is good. He is an honor to his family, and a shining example to the rich young men of his native land. The city will be in no small debt to his memory. Henry George was not known quite so long, but the record of his life is that of an honest man; he may honestly differ from him in many of his views; we may not accept all of his theories, but no living man who has studied the author of Progress and Poverty, ever doubted his honesty for a moment. He represents many thousands of working men—the class from which he sprang. His call was the spontaneous call of the public, and not the gift of a political machine. They are all good men, better far, than have been nominated for the office of Mayor during the present generation; whoever is elected we need have no fear—so I here give the old Tom Sayers toast, "May the best man win."
