HEBBEW STANDARD. There's never a day so sonny But a fiftle cloud appears: There's never a life so happy But has had its time of tears; Yet the sun shines out the brighter

When the stormy tempest clears. There's never a garden growing With rose in every plet; There's never a heart so hurdened But it has one tender spot: We have all to prune the border To find the for-get-me-not,

There's never a cup so pleasant There's never a path so rauged That bears not the prints of feet; And we have a He,per promised

For the trials that we may meet. There's never a son that rises The fints that gleam in the morning And the hour time is the sweetest Is between the dark and light.

There's never a dream that's happy But the waking makes us sad; There's never a dream of sorrow But the waking makes us grad; We shall look some day with wonder At the troubles we have had.

THE STATUE IN THE SEA WOOD. In the sea wood he sits alone, By men forgotten and unknown, A soul struck suddenly to stone.

Unbeeding through the conturies The bloom and fading of the trees. The cens-less surging of the seas. Bright flowers spring about his feet, Above him where the branches meet. The little birds make music sweet.

He knows not of them, his still gaze, Piereing Time's dim mysterious ways, Sees but one day among the days; The day that left him sitting there, The landen of a fixed descair. Percetten all the men who trod

In the mond years that same green sod, The men who werehip him as god, No shadow on lits awful eves Has fallen from their prayers and eries, From blood and smoke of sacrifice. Intent, in silent unjesty
