The return of Brother Beecher from his European trip has made Brooklyn supremely happy. There has been some tall lying somewhere. As respectable a paper as The London Truth declared that his lecture mission was a failure, and said that on one particular occasion the house was hardly half-full. Major Pond, who has managed Mr. Beecher's lectures for many years, says the trip was a continual ovation, and that the Plymonth Pastor returns to his native heath, his pocket roundly stuffed with ten pound notes. But whether England received him well or ill there can be no doubt about his welcome in Brooklyn. Inside or outside of Plymouth church it is all the same-Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, rich and poor, white or black, all seem to have a soft place in their hearts for him somewhere. His utter disbelief in the tortures of Sheol has not shaken the fealty of Andover; and his wavering faith on the thirty-nine articles has not alienated Haryard or Yale. His first Sunday was a crush. Every available inch of room was occupied, and the politeness of the ushers was put to the severest tests. Mr. Beecher was at his best, and at the close of the service, as the In speaking of the various cities that he crowd pressed forward to grasp his hand it was evident that neither time nor space had world, the Prince said that Washington was evident that neither time nor space had weakened the affection with which Plymouth church regards its pastor.
