I have just received a case of
RED SEAL LYE,
I got it to sell for removing paint from floors or anywhere else from which you wish to remove it and to cleanse grease spots. It is also useful for many other purposes among which is to make soap. I have circulars for distribution, call and get one.

Have received to-day, four cases of Barker's Horse, Cattle & Poultry Powder, which I intend to keep in connection with Blue Grass Condition Powders, and recommend both makes as exceptional as to value and quality, if indeed a recommendation is necessary. Have circulars to spare.

I have now put in four of the W. and B. DOUGLAS FORCE PUMPS and have sent in my orders for four more, all of which are sold and will be placed as soon as they arrive. I am having a grand success with them. Everybody is pleased. I can please you if you give me a chance to put one in your well. I also keep in stock the CUMBER WOOD PUMPS.

My stock of Oils of all kinds, Paints of all kinds,
Tar,
Woven Wire,
Wagon Grease,
Iron Kettles,
Copper Kettles,
Glass, etc., etc.,
is as complete as ever, and can give you good figures.

COAL!
I wish to add that I have leased the coal yard recently built by Mr. Samuel Seiler, and am ready to furnish you with COAL of a superior quality at reasonable prices and will guarantee you GOOD WEIGHT.
Feed Cutters, Corn Shellers and the likes in the machine line being now in season, I would call your attention to my stock of them. I sell none but the best, at prices below which it is impossible to sell and live by it.

What True Merit Will Do.
The unappreciated sale of BOWLER'S GERMAN SYRUP within a few years, has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and throat and Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by Physicians, as it does not dry up a Cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected and leaves them in a perfectly healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the disease makes their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you. It is sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price, 75 cts., large bottle.

That was half commanding, and a look, something about her, as I have said before, which reminded me of all the deep passion and intensity of October's warmth veiled under her stilled hair.
Such was Flora Grandison when she came to us, and it is not surprising that Ralph's eyes lingered on her lovely face until he was compelled to turn them away for ever change's sake.
Time passed very pleasantly.
We lived in the country, or, rather, just outside of a stirring town, and we could therefore combine the pleasures of both city and country life.
How Miss Grandison enjoyed her outdoor rambles with the children in the brilliantly tinted autumn woods! Ralph frequently accompanied them, much to her annoyance. It seemed to me who watched with jealous eyes every movement that indicated his growing interest in the charming young lady.
We knew nothing of her, save that she was from a southern city, and was thrown upon her own resources for support.
But her beauty spoke for itself, and I felt convinced, the moment Ralph first set his eyes upon her, that sooner or later she would break his heart.
I wonder why the thought never struck me that she, a poor governess, would be glad to win him for a husband. But it never did.

There was not the least sign of coquetry about her. She did not seem to care at all for his attentions.
She accepted them quietly, smilingly, when she could not evade them, yet I always felt that she would rather be left alone.
I liked her for that, though I could not get over the idea that she would be his fate.
One day, very late in November, the sun shone radiantly and an almost summer warmth pervaded the atmosphere.
Tempted by the beauty of the scene, I donned my hat and cloak and went for a stroll in the leafless woods. I had not gone far when the sound of Ralph's voice struck my ear.
It was strained and despairing, and he was saying, oh! how earnestly:
"For God's sake, Flora, give me a little hope!"
"Have I not told you there is none?" I heard her answer, almost desperately; "I desire that you will never mention this subject again, Mr. Percival."
Not daring to play the eavesdropper, I walked away and joined the children, who were at play some distance further on.
Miss Grandison and Ralph had not seen me. But my blood was boiling at the thought of Ralph suffering through her.
When I saw him again the poor boy looked as white and miserable as a ghost.
The next day he left us for an indefinite time, pleading some business excuse, but I knew well what had driven him away.
I loved him dearly, and could hardly bear the loneliness of the house after he was gone.
At last, exasperated by her calm, queenly loveliness, when my own heart was aching so, I vented my sorrow and displeasure upon Miss Grandison.
She was sitting by the window, reading, and she just raised her eyes to give me one long, steady look, slightly mingled with surprise, then dropped them to her book again without one word.
I then told her what I had overheard, and repeated, angrily, that it was her fault that Ralph had gone away.
"I am sorry," she said quietly, "that you heard what you did. No one would ever have known of your brother's disappointment from me. But surely, Miss Percival, you cannot say that I have ever encouraged his unfortunate love either by word or look."
I was forced to acknowledge that she had not.
"But, since he did love you, in spite of all, why should you have refused him, Miss Grandison? Is not Ralph young, rich, handsome, and good enough for any woman on earth?"
"He is all that, Miss Percival," she replied, almost sadly.
"Then, why not?"
"I have no love to give," she interrupted hastily; "and even could I love any one, I have not the right."
"Not the right?" I repeated. "Then you are engaged to some other?"
"No," she said quietly, "but I saw the crimson in her cheeks begin to deepen.
"Because I am already a wife."
"You?"
"Yes, Miss Percival--I!"
Already angry with her before this admission, her words drove me quite beyond my power of self-control, and my voice was full of bitter scorn. Yet it was not meant for the quiet, intensely scorn in hers, as she rose to her full, queenly height, her dark eyes glittering like stars, and the crimson spots in her creamy cheeks glowing like the burning heart of the richest, reddest rose.
In all our acquaintance I had never admired her so much as I did that moment. But, remembering the wrong she had done my brother, I felt no kindness toward her.
"Pray explain, if you can, Miss Grandison," I said, in my coldest tone, "why you entered this house under a false character, in which you won your brother's heart, only to break it. What have you to say to that?"
"Nothing, except that your brother knows all I have to tell, and I do not feel called upon to disclose my little troubles to the world. If you deem me unwell for the position I hold in your house, Miss Percival, I will go elsewhere."
"You may," I answered coldly.
I was assailed by my unkindness, even as I spoke, but, believing her, just then, to be a designing woman, the calm composure of her manner angered me until I neither spoke nor acted like myself.
"Very well," she said; and my heart smote me at the deathly pallor of her face as she turned to leave the room.
As that instant a servant handed me a letter from Ralph, and I tore it open and read it where I stood. Such a letter--explaining why he had gone away, and declaring that Miss Grandison, whom he pronounced the best and noblest of women, was not to blame for his folly. He ended by begging me to be kind to her, and not to allow her to leave our home so long as she needed such a position.
Half-penitently, I placed the letter in her hand, remarking that Ralph's wishes were law to me, and that I hoped she would forget my words and do what was best for her own happiness.

She hesitated a minute or so, with the open letter in her hand, and I knew that a severe struggle was going on beneath that calm, beautiful exterior.
"It is humiliating," she said at length, with a little quivering smile, to remain here under the circumstances; but I am poor, Miss Percival, and I must not think too much of my dignity. Besides, I was sure if you had known the truth, you would not have been so unjust."
And so she stayed.
Months after, when I had grown to love and esteem her for the "best and noblest of women," as Ralph had called her, she told me her story.
Briefly, she had had a large fortune willed to her by an uncle of her husband, whose only heir, through jealousy and greed, had blasted her life by cruel slanders. In the bitterness of her hatred they had estranged her husband from her, and he had deserted her, believing her to be false.
Her enemies had been successful in all their plots against her, and she had borne persecutions and insults which, as I listened to their pathetic recital, made me wonder that a woman like her could have endured them and lived.
Abandoned by the husband whom she still loved better than her own life, and thrown, homeless, upon the world, she had for a long time to herself, simply dropping her married title for the sake of being less exposed to curious questioning.
When winter came around again, we were expecting Ralph, who wrote that he was heart-whole once more, and intended to bring a friend to help him enjoy his welcome home.
How handsome Ralph looked as he walked smilingly and happily into the me of our family circle, and what a splendid-looking man was the stranger who followed close behind him!
As Miss Grandison's dark, beautiful eyes glanced up at them, a shriek that I shall never forget rang through the room, and she fell fainting into the stranger's arms.
What need to say more? Ralph had contemplated himself a modern Don Quixote, and had secretly pledged himself to right the wrongs of the woman who had refused him!
He had found Paul Grandison, had told him where his wife was, and what a pure, true woman she had proved herself, and Paul had come on with him to kneel at Flora's feet (as he afterward told me) and crave her pardon.
I think Ralph was almost as happy when Flora turned those beautiful brown eyes upon him and murmured, "God bless you, my noble friend," as he would have been could his own dream of winning her have been fulfilled.

WELL SHE HATED HIM.
"I used to think that Gus Simpkinson was a real nice young man, but I just hate him now," said one young lady to another.
"Why, what has he done?"
"He's treated me shamefully. That's what."
"In what way?"
"I was the other evening at the party I said to, 'let's eat a philopene, and if you say yes or no to any of my questions, I'll give you a box of candy, and if I say 'yes' or 'no,' you'll give me a box.'"
"Then what?"
"After the party he took me home, and all the way there he talked just as sweet as could be about love in a cottage, and men should not live alone, and all that. And when we got to the front gate he said: 'Fannie, I have waited for this opportunity a long time. Will you marry me? I will send you a box of candy, and--and--' Here her face colored her voice, and--"
"And what did he do then?" inquired her listener, eagerly.
"How could I have loved any one, with all his right; that's what he did." And she swept ahead and would not be comforted.

THE ONLY WAY TO CONQUER EYE-PAIN.
It is perfectly proper to introduce medicine and other artificial aids into the stomach, in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food. They will not. No! It is impossible to do this. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the various diseases and disabilities which it so surely produces, is to remove the activity of the stomach by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It is the most inveterate of all ailments, and one which is very difficult to treat. The liver, the bowels, the stomach, the spleen, the pancreas, the gall bladder, the kidneys, the lungs, the heart, the brain, the nerves, the muscles, the skin, the hair, the nails, the teeth, the
