THE COMET.

BY OLIVER WENDERL BOLMES.

The comet! he is on his way,

And singing as he files: The whizzing planets shrink before

The spectre of the skies.

Ah, well may regal orbs barn blue,

And satellites turn pale, -- on, on by whistling spheres of light.

One spern from his demoniac heel.

Where darkness might be bottled un-

And what would happen to the land,

Ten billion leagues of tall!

He flashes and be flames; He turns not to the left nor right, He asks them not their names.

And sold for "Tyrian Cye."

And how would look the sen,

Our earth should chance to be:

Methought I saw and heard it all

Full but and high the sea would boil,

The comet's course to spy; I beard a scream,—the gathered rays

Were armed with gogisles green;

op cracked the guns! whiz liew the balls!

If in the bearded devil's path

Full red the forests gleam;

In a dyspeptic dream!

I saw a totor take his tube

Had stewed the tutor's evel

Bang went the magazine:

I read upon the warring back,

"The Dream of Beezlebub."

And ever and anon he bent

To wet there as they dried.

He could not see his verses burn,

Although his brain was fried,

I saw the scalding pitch roll down

And streams of smoke, like water-sponts,

Burst through the rundling mines.

Lasked the firemen why they made

They answered not, but all the while

The brakes went up and down.

saw a cripple scorch his band

Such doise about the town:

Upon a baking cgg;

Extinguishing life leg. saw nine geese upon the wing

Was all a flery blage.

I had been rash at mine.

Its memory haunts me still,

The sterming sea, the crimson glave,

That wreathed each wooded hill;

before he answered.

Towards the frozen pole,

Crisped to a crackling coal,

Writhe in the blistering rays,

The herbage in his shrinking jaws

Bob through the bubbling brine

And thoughts of supper crossed my soul,-

Strange sights! strange sounds! O fearful
