At this rate, one alumina makes a pretty decent spring.

Justice in Reading is known by more than one name.

Spring pools and weather prophets are now hard at work.

Now let Kerner try the jury on the insanity plea they might escape.

Our model men should bear in mind that we are all satisfied to drink water.

This car may go, but how is it with the broken axle and rickety building?

The best time to be in the spring, is when one is not necessarily presidential.

One certain effect of an European war would be a very noticeable increase in the death rate.

The Republicans are considerably ahead of the Democracy in the matter of presidential honors.

It is undoubtedly edifying to ex-Mayor Smith to remember that he had "a fine day" to be railroaded into private life.

PHILADELPHIA has opened an aggressive war on the dives and gambling dens of that city, and two or three of the dive keepers have to far been found guilty.

The sufferings from drought in Texas increase daily. In many localities water drawn in limited quantities for a distance of ten miles, and unless rain comes very soon the people must desert their homes.

The reduction in the public debt during March amounted to $12,808,467, and for the first nine months of the present fiscal year $70,822,824.

The net cash in the treasury is $1,318,223,658. The net cash in the treasury is $21,850,083, or about $3,000,000 more than on March 1.

N. Y. Evening Sun: "One of the chief causes and reasons that may safely be depended upon to keep down the numbers of the anarchist squad, big as its voice is, and as frightful as its frolics, is the solid and sustaining fact that anybody who tries to be an anarchist in this land of freedom is a jackass. Now, the voice of the jackass is like the sound of many waters; but he is not ferocious save as a food waster and a kicker."

A TERRIBLE explosion took place in coal shaft No. 2, Savannah, Indian Territory, on the 4th inst., by which nineteen miners lost their lives.

Scarcely months ago, one Francis Kerner, brutally murdered his wife in Reading, and placed the body in a tub and set fire to the house, which was destroyed along with its contents.

Kerner had for many years made life a burden to his wife by his cruel and continued ill treatment, and death to her was a relief from the ills of the world.

At the trial about ten days ago it was conclusively proven that Kerner committed the deed, and to all right and honest thinking men and women he should have been found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to die; but by some perjury of the last year, a verdict of murder in the second degree was rendered, and on Monday he was sentenced to twelve years imprisonment.

THE COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT. On Tuesday, the third day of May, 1887, the school directors of Carbon county will meet in the Court House, at Mauch Chunk, for the purpose of electing a County Superintendent of public schools.

It behooves the directors to act wisely in this matter as it is of considerable moment to the teachers and patrons of the schools that a gentleman possessed of all the necessary qualifications should be elected to fill this very important and responsible position.

The law stipulates that the person elected shall be possessed of scientific and literary acquirements as well as of skill and experience in the art of teaching.

The directors should, consequently, not err in their choice of candidates, but be governed strictly by the letter and spirit of the law in their selection.

Remember, That on the County Superintendent depends the success of our public school system.

That it is highly important and imperative that a man fitted by the necessary attainments should hold the office.

That egotism and conceit do not "fill the bill."

That at present, Prof. J. L. Pottelger, principal of the Western public schools, is the favorite candidate with the directors, from the fact that he is eminently qualified to fill the position with much credit to the educational interests of the county.

AN IMPORTANT DAY. Tuesday's N. Y. Evening Sun, speaking of the Inter-State Commerce bill, pertinently remarks: "Today is a critical day with the railroads of the United States great and small. To-day an extraordinary piece of national legislation goes into effect."

Originally instituted for the relief of the Western farmers who thought their substance was sapped by the charges which the railroads made for carrying the produce of the land to a market, it is confessed, now that it is become a law, that there is no class of producers upon whom it is likely to bear more oppressively than upon the Western farmers.

The way of Congress are inseparable, and it will never be clearly understood how a legislative and judicial body delivered itself of so paradoxical and contradictory a measure as the Inter-State Commerce bill is now believed to be.

We admit that great benefits will ensue from the abolition of the free pass system, and from the compulsory publication of tariffs, and from the abandonment of the commissions upon sales of passenger tickets.

But the damage to lesser properties in railroads and the aggrandizement of the great corporations at the expense of the weaker will work grave injuries.

Besides, the people generally will probably have to pay more for transportation than they had to pay before. The bill is now a law, and it is not likely to be amended in any material degree so that the true result is the law.

It is a pity that the "great" bill, which has been so long in the history of the "free" press, is not like the "great" bill.

Brooklyn's New York Letter.

Special to the CARBON ADVOCATE.

Wanted, a janitor; apply at the Equitable Life Insurance Building, Broadway, New York City. Salary $10,000 per annum.

On Broadway between Pine and Cedar streets is a huge building of granite, stately and grand in its proportions, and one of the most striking and imposing structures on that Imperial thoroughfare.

It will not be many years before Broadway will stand unrivalled by any great avenue in the world for the costly grandeur of its buildings, which are the stately offices of the merchant princes of our land, of which New York is the commercial queen.

From the point at the Bowling Green where the great tower of the Produce Exchange stands out in bold relief against the sky to where the beautiful cross crowns the tapering spire of Grace Church, there is not a building of any structure that in massive grandeur will compare with the Equitable Life Insurance building.

From time to time additions have been made to it, but recently the most radical change has been effected and the new additions, now almost completed, exceed the size of the original building.

This magnificent palace Thomas Cleary was janitor and he was at the same time an Ahlman of the City of New York.

The revelations of the past week have materially modified our own and the public's opinion as to the dignity and responsibility of the office of janitor, and we have taken a new departure.

In the olden time we looked upon a janitor as a person who swept out offices, dusted off desks, who cleaned out spittoons and who found his most valuable perquisites in the waste paper basket which an ill-advised generosity allowed him to plunder.

But if this sort of a janitor ever existed he will now have to be sought among the fossiliferous fragments of the silted age, or in remote countries where whose vitality and energy has as yet been untouched by the advancing civilization of our cities.

It is not many years since Thomas Cleary landed from Ireland at Castle Garden, his earthly possessions being tied up in a faded cotton handkerchief; his clothes were of the kind worn by the poorest of the Irish peasantry; he had not a nickel in his pocket, and as he strolled up Broadway, stopping to take a good look at Trinity spire, in his wildest dream he could scarcely have conceived that in the not distant future he would be looked upon as one of the fathers of this great city, and his voice as an American citizen, which was only worth fifty cents two weeks after he landed, as a New York Alderman, when a railroad franchise was up, would be worth the magnificent sum of twenty thousand dollars.

While I write, on the table before me is a list of Mr. Cleary's compatriots and coadjutors in the Board of Aldermen which has now become immortal in infancy.

The names are suggestive and every one of them not convicted and in the State's Prison is now under indictment. The first on the list is Thomas Cleary, then come Robert D. Lacy, Charles Dempsey, Michael Duffy, of Duaneville, Patrick Farley, Patrick Kenny, McCabe, Michael McLaughlin, Arthur J. McQuade, John C. O'Connor, John O'Neil and Charles H. Reilly.

Mr. Cleary, whose name heads this precious list, was not long in getting a job; the freeze coat, the brogues and the baubles gave way to superfine broadcloth, patent leather and a shiner hat; the poor immigrant who considered himself well paid in Ireland at five or six pence a year was not long in reaching a point where he backed away thousands of dollars in his old tin boots, his grandfather did so of turf outside of his cabin door in Wicklow. No sweeping or spittoon cleaning for Thomas Cleary! Why, man, he was receiving a salary equal to that of the Governor of the State of New York; yes, equal to that of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States! With this golden influx of wealth came the tremendous possibilities of political advancement.

The ward that Alderman Cleary represented is next to the ward largely made up of banks, offices and stores; within its lines millions of dollars are stored, and while it is the life of busy, pushing thousands during the day, at night it is abandoned to policemen and janitors, the entire resident population being less than a thousand, though the abundant votes turned out by its ballot-boxes have frequently turned an election. In contrast to all the other indicted Aldermen, Thomas Cleary took the stand in his own behalf, and the judge, jury and prosecuting attorney opened their eyes as he told the story of the thousand dollar bills which he had tucked away in his old tin box. It staggered the jury so that they were compelled to discharge them, and for a time at least Thomas Cleary is safe. It is morally certain that even if he did lag twenty thousand of the swag he will never do so again; but in view of the unsavory associations and unpromising notoriety, I am anxious to see if his place has become vacant, and I am expecting hourly to see the advertisement—"Wanted, a janitor."

Bravo, bravissimo Cornelius Vanderbilt! He has presented to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Rosa Bonheur's masterpiece "Horse Toss." For sixteen years he has been in the Stewart mansion, and hardly a mortal eye outside of Judge Hillton's immediate friends has ever been permitted to look upon it. Henceforth the name of Stewart and Hillton are completely wiped out from its connection and it passes into history for all coming time as the Imperial gift of a Vanderbilt. It is only a little time since one member of the family expelled one of the finest hospitals in the Union, and another member added a branch where poor mothers in the petticoat of child-birth might receive as good medical assistance as any lady in the land. It is pretty evident now that each member of this family will have some grand monument behind him which shall pass his name with blessing to generations yet unborn.

I should judge that the loss on the Stewart collection cannot be short of half a million of dollars. The auction of the pictures being over, the next in order is my lady's wardrobe; nightgowns, stockings, undergarments and wigs. Bravo, thrifty Judge Hillton. As an executor you will no doubt make your trust pay cent per cent, and while patriotically your taste may be questioned in this novel sale, as a financier of dead men's estates you are an unequalled success.

The investigation of the Legislative Committee into the affairs of the City of Brooklyn continues to disclose the most necessary facts. It seems to make very little difference whether the incumbent was a Democrat or Republican; it was impossible to get at the gamblers. Both District Attorneys, the present incumbent a Democrat and his predecessor a Republican, made loud professions of what they were going to do, but not a hair on a gambler's head was hurt, and it was publicly stated that each day after the races a roll of thousands dollars was made up and a messenger brought it in to some Brooklyn official, who ran it where it could be the most easily.

There were two hundred racing days so that the blood must have been handsome, but whether there was or whether there was not, the gamblers escaped unharmed, and Anthony Comstock who tried to enforce the law was denounced as one of the blackest villains unhung. Queer, isn't it?

On the trial the law sheriff with an official receipt of $17,000 cash, came out of office a bankrupt, and his immediate predecessor is in the same bad fix. Brooklyn is fast emulating New York in the system of excelling in her blood officials, and in time, if she only improves at her present rate, she may be able to take the municipal cake.

A very nice youth belonging to a highly respectable family injured his arm so that amputation became necessary, and the shock to his nervous system was so severe that it was a question for a time if the boy was going to pull through. To assist and care for him in his time of peril a steady, solitary, experienced nurse was procured, and she through long weeks of the heaviest duty, through the long hours of the night and eventually the boy got well. The nurse was not uncomely to look upon, and she carried her thirty-seven summers with the air of a younger woman.
