A Suggestion to the raveling Public.

Tourists, emigrants and mariners find that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicinal safeguard against unhealthful influences, upon which they can implicitly rely, since it prevents the effects of vitiated atmosphere, unaccustomed or unwholesome diet, bad water, or other conditions unfavorable to health. On long voyages, or journeys in latitudes adjacent to the equator, it is especially useful as a preventive of the febrile complaints and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, which are apt attack natives of the temperate zone sojourning or traveling in such regions, and it is an excellent protection against the influence of extreme cold, sudden changes of temperature, exposure to damp or extreme fatigue. It not only prevents intermittent and remittent fever, and other diseases of a malarial type, but eradicates them, a fact which has been notorious for years past in North and South America, Mexico, the West Indies, Australia, and other countries.

The Fancier's Motives.

People raise and breed chickens from a variety of motives. There is the sordid motive of gain, which divides itself into all the different channels by which money can be made by raising fowls on the one hand, and breeding them on the other. The fowl raiser who regards the hen simply as 'an egg-laying machine, not so easily managed as an incubator, and costing more besides, seeks the most prolific layers, cares for them well, forces their egg-laying in every way he knows, and measures their beauty and value by the number of eggs they will lay. The raiser of broilers is of his ilk, and so is the fattener of table-fowls and capons. They work for the shekels, and it is an honorable and commendable business. We wish there were a great deal more of it done. Then there are fowl breeders who raise fowls of pure breeds, and whose motive is to sell. They have a sort of enthusiasm for their beautiful and varied breeds, but for one as much as for another. They go from yard to yard and point out the fine points of one, with the same zest that they do that of others. They breed true to points and the standard that they may be sure to win more or less prizes at the poultry shows, for the reputation of the establishment, and the better sale of their chickens at fancy prices. Breeders of game fowls breed to win. There is nothing sordid about their breeding. They sell nothing; all not fully up to their standard of excellence are killed and eaten, though they might be sold at high prices. The test is the pit, and on this and its influences we will not dwell.

Now there is another class of breeders, truly called "Fanciers," who have an enthusiasm for a certain breed or group of breeds, and these they raise and study, and try to perfect in every way in their power. They do not breed for money, but for love; as an incidental reward they may get plenty of eggs. They may have large prices offered for birds out of winning coops, but that is not the motive of the fancier. He breeds for the perfection of his pets, corresponds, discusses points, exchanges feathers, and eggs and cockerels, perhaps, aiming to graft on a good point here, or eliminate a false color there, and he rejoices in success.

Keeping the Flower Garden.

A small garden with few well-chosen, well-grown flowering plants, if kept in scrupulous order and neatness, will be far more gratifying to its owner, and to his friends, than a large collection of plants without order, arrangement or neatness. Of course, there is a choice in plants, and a garden of the common flowers, well kept, is far more creditable than a jungle of expensive novelties, left to care for themselves. "Good keeping" in the garden is equivalent to "good keeping" in the house. Both depend upon hundreds of small things, easily done if attended to at the right time. In a large garden a special tool house will be found most useful, but in a small one a place for the tools must be found in some other building. The wall of a woodshed or of a barn, or of a suitable, large, cupboard-like structure, built against a board fence or a building, may be made—indeed, any place that will hold the tools. It is far more important that the tools are brought back to their places after using, than that their places should be showy. In every garden, even a very small one, there occur various materials, collectively known as "rubbish," which must be disposed of. It is a mistake to have a rubbish heap in some corner, and throw all the refuse matter from the garden upon it. There should be at least three places of deposit for the different kinds of rubbish, if the premises are large enough, otherwise it must be removed altogether.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at T. D. Thomas Drug Store as there giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying.

Trial Bottles free at T. D. Thomas' Drug Store.

Lawns and Evergreens.

In making a new lawn, the first point is the proper preparation of the soil. It should be thoroughly and deeply tilled, with an abundance of well composted manure worked into it. Then sow four or six bushels of seed to the acre. In making a new lawn, it is well to lay an edge of turf along the paths or roads, and along the margins of the beds that are to be made in the lawn——If paths or walks are to be made, whatever the material, secure a good foundation by excavating and filling in broken stone to make a solid bottom—— This is the month usually preferred for transplanting evergreens. The essential point is to prevent the roots from drying. From the minute they are taken from the soil to the time when they go into it again, the roots must not dry. Shelter them from the sun and air, and, if possible, keep them wet.

—A good deal of the peculiar mutton taste is taken out of it when mutton is cured.

—To properly keep straw and hay in stacks, the stacks must be so constructed as to shed water.

—A writer in Gardening Illustrated says he has found sulphide of potassium an efficient remedy for mildew on the strawberry.

—Spulphur and old tobacco leaves burned in the poultry house, the house being closed perfectly tight, will clean out the red lice.

—One of the best supplementary feeds with corn fodder is wheat bran. Usually it can be bought cheaply at this season and is even better in the winter as a supplementary feed for cows.

—The more rapidly air is brought into contact with cider the faster the latter turns into vinegar. Draw out a little cider daily and return it to the barrel, if for vinegar.
