THE RECOLLECTION.
BY PERCY WADSWORTH SHELLEY.
Now the last day of many days.
All beautiful and bright as thou,
The latest and the last, is dead,
The memory, and write its praise up,
Up, do thou wot'st what come, trace
The epitaph of glory fled,
For now the earth has changed its face,
A sorrows' autumn is here,
That shrills the ocean's foam!
The lightest wind was in its nest,
The tempest in its home.
The whistling waves were half asleep,
The doubts were gone to play,
And on the bosom of the deep
The smile of Heaven lay;
It seemed as if the hour were now
When from beyond the tomb
They scattered from above the sun
A light of Paradise!

We paused amid the pines that stood
The giants of the waste,
Fetters by storms to shapes as rude
As serpents in their coils, and
And smothered by every breeze
That under heaven is blown
To harkness and hush beneath,
As tender as its own.
Now all the trees top top with sleep.
Like green waves on the sea,
As still as in the sleep deep
The ocean-woods—no noisy bee,
How calm it was!—the silence there
By such a calm sea loomed,
Made stiller by her sound
The invisible quietude;
The beauty of peace we drew
With its soft motion made no less
The calm that round us grew.
There seemed from the roughest seat
Of the wide mountain waste
To the soft flowers of the meadow
A single note flowed,
A spirit stirred around,
A thrilling shiver stole,
A melody was heard
Our mortal nature's strife:
And still I felt the center of
The magic circle there
Was our fair Eden that filled with love
The lifeless atmosphere.
We passed beneath the pools that lie
Under the forest loam;
Each seemed as 'twere a little sky
Gulfed in a world below;
Ornaments of nature's art
Which in the dark earth lay,
More boundless than the depth of night
And purer than the day;
No cloud on their faces grew
As in the upper air,
More perfect than the atmosphere
And more surpassing there,
There by the globe and neighborhood laws,
And through the dark green wood
The white and twinkling line the dawn
Out of a speckled cloud.
Sweet sleep's light in air world above
Can never well be said,
Were tinged by the water's love
Of that fair forest green;
And all was interfused beneath
With an Elysian cheer,
An atmosphere without a breath
A softer day below.
Like one beloved, the scene had lent
To the dark water's breast
Its every leaf and lineament,
With more than truth's sweet rest;
Until an evensong wind crept by,
Like an unwelcome thought
Which from the mist's too faithful eye
Flashed upon our breast;
—Though thou art ever fair and kind,
The forests ever green,
Less art a peace in Shelley's mind
Than calm in waters seen!

Mrs. Seaford's Boarder.
BY GERALDINE FLEMING.
The announcement that Miss Natalia Roche was coming made quite a stir in the Seaford household.
Miss Roche was a great beauty; she had just returned from some fashionable foreign tour; she had also just purchased a grand mansion, and she had arranged to become temporarily an inmate of the Seaford boarding establishment until her own residence would be wholly ready for her occupancy.

"Perhaps she wanted more quiet, or to be nearer her own house, which is not very far from here, you know," said Mrs. Seaford's son, a dapper young gentleman with glittering eyes and a shining black mustache and a complexion aristocratically pale.
"I tell you, King, I think there is fate in her coming here," his mother declared solemnly. "But then, every person always has one opportunity in a lifetime, and perhaps you are now to have yours. She may fancy you, and you may fancy her; stranger things have happened. Anyhow there will be no harm done if you meet her at the station and interest yourself about her bundles and the cab to fetch her."

"Oh, anything to please you, mother," King assented lazily, as he adjusted his bushy hair. "I'll just take a trip across to the depot and escort the lady to her new quarters, if you like."
"And I'll just request that you, Mr. Alden, do not transfer his belongings from the second floor above to the top floor hall-room. Miss Roche may have use for the alcove, room, and I don't feel obliged to consult the convenience of any one so regular with his board money as Mr. Alden has been lately." Mrs. Seaford said to a pretty girl who tripped up the stairs just as the young gentleman sauntered away.

"But Mr. Alden will not be home to transfer his belongings, aunty," the girl replied as she took up a feather-duster almost as high as her own graceful self.
"I went everything in order when Miss Roche arrived," Mrs. Seaford said. "And I do hope King will properly appreciate his opportunity and interest himself about her comfort and all that," she concluded, as the girl put down the duster and proceeded to convey the articles mentioned to a loftier though hamper chamber.

"Mr. Alden will be pleased," Pheny ventured to restate as she passed with a load of books at the bottom of the stairs.
"I do not know why his pleasure of displeasure need concern you," her aunt responded harshly. "And how often must I remind you, Pheny, that when I brought you to live with me, I hoped to have a few cheerful services from you instead of so much idling and meddling. And I do not know why you need meddle about Mr. Alden, nor do I approve the way you have tried to make yourself friendly with him."

"Civility and prompt payment are all I exact from my boarders; civility and the worth of the money are all I consider due to them. Anything except strictest civility is prohibited between them and my family—I never mix sentiment with business myself."
"Then, aunty, I suppose you would be dreadfully angry if King should get sentimental about the hearse—and stranger things have happened, you know." Pheny retorted indignantly, as she tripped up the stairs to the dismal hall-room to which the remis Mr. Alden was to be unconspicuously banished.

"Pretty Pheny was rarely dejected or angered by the severity of her relative, who, like a prickly pear, was after all tolerably pleasant if one could only become accustomed to the prickles!
And Pheny had become inured to the sharp speech and stinging taunts which she deemed were probably less than "want of heart than want of thought."
And besides, the girl thought to bear her burden with a glad heart; she chose rather to wear a load of grief and spirit than a load of plainness and spirit. Like green waves on the sea, as still as in the sleep deep, the ocean-woods—no noisy bee, how calm it was!

"Well, I am astonished, I must say," Mrs. Seaford ejaculated, in shocked rebuke.
"You have no reason to be," the smiling Mr. Alden returned, with a somewhat reserved courtesy; "your little niece is to be my wife. And I am happy to assure you I can provide for her more bountifully than you may have supposed—as, with my dear step-sister, Miss Natalia Roche, I chance to be co-hire to a very plentiful property."
"That was one of the gratifying disclosures to which you alluded in your note, no doubt," said King, who had just sauntered through an inner door and stood listening with a half-sneer beneath his shiny mustache.

"My sister is with me—Miss Roche," he said, as he drew forward a delicate, gravehaired, middle-aged, little lady attired plainly in none too expensive mourning black. At this juncture the brilliantly discerning Mrs. Seaford felt her astonishment was becoming rather more bewildering than comfortable.
"I believe I already have the honor of entertaining the hearse—Miss Natalia Roche," said she, attempting one of the imposing airs she had copied from her distinguished new boarder.
"You have unfortunately been entertaining an unscrupulous maid whom I discharged some weeks ago," the mild-eyed little lady said calmly, and with a tone and manner which were sufficiently convincing.
The dead silence which followed was not unlike the hush succeeding a thunderbolt.
Then the naughty Pheny giggled, a very small giggle and instantly regretted.

The startled King sheepishly twirled his shiny mustache, hesitated, and then vainly strode up the stairs to the freshly adorned second-floor parlor.
But the too persuasive hostess had forestalled the storm, and had vanished no one knew whether, and no one cared, to pursue her.
Mrs. Seaford dropped limply into the nearest chair and stared in blank astonishment.
"Well, I have been imposed upon for once, I must say," she admitted dubiously, as if she had not quite decided whether to laugh at the ludicrous denouncement or to cry at the rude demolition of all her magnificent castles in the air.
"And after all, the affair might have ended later to her niece. "And you, at least, Pheny, have been lucky enough." "My branch of the family had the luck instead of the shrewdness, you know, aunty," was the demurely mischievous answer.

NOT THERE NEVERTHELESS.
A city hall avenue was standing on the Woodward avenue steps of that structure yesterday when a man who had his hand on his stomach came up and said:
"Big pardon, but you have the look of a physician—an eminent physician."
"Oh, I'm no doctor," was the reply.
"Sorry for that, but perhaps you can give me some information. What are the symptoms of poisoning?"
"Have you been poisoned?"
"Well, I have queer feelings in my stomach."
"Is it a burning sensation?"
"No."
"Do you have spasmodic pains?"
"Not yet."
"Feel shivery, with a great thirst and heat?"
"No, nothing like that. I feel a complete numbness for about half an hour and every time I think of jam and eggs my mouth waters."
"Why, it may be hunger."
"I shouldn't be a bit wonder if it was, being I haven't eaten anything for thirty-six hours."
The official uttered a "Humph!" looked the man over three or four times, and then handed him twenty cents and said:
"Better get some new scheme. It takes too long to game to the point in this.

FORTUNES ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Strange—Sally, a man tells me that the lot you just sold me was under water a month ago.
Omaha Real Estate Man—Yes, it's pretty dusty by this time I suppose.
"Dusty! Well, yes, but—"
"About June, though, there will probably be another flood and that will get the lot in nice condition again."
"What! Two floods a year?"
"Only two, unfortunately. We are in hopes, though, of getting congress to do something to make the Mississippi a little offenser. If the bill goes through your lot will be worth $1,000 a front foot. Just hold on to it!"
Knit gloves have broad stitching up the backs.
Mohairs in side stripes have made their appearance.
Very high straight collars are seen outside new dresses.
Matched toilets are growing in favor.
Yellow and red wheels are again seen on utility's carriage.

A Philadelphia saloon keeper, upon being asked by his son what short-handled waiter it was making his fingers in and of three around the willy class.

Trouble Ahead.
When the appetite fails, and sleep grows restless and unrefreshing, there is trouble ahead. The digestive organs, when healthy, crave food; the nervous system, when vigorous and tranquil, craves its proper share of stimulants. If, therefore, to be effective, should not be a mere appearance, but a reality, the system should be soothed by the unalloyed use of a sedative or a tonic. As the regular use of Simmonds' Liver Regulator invigorates the stomach and promotes assimilation of food by the system, which invigorates the nervous system, as well as the other parts of the physical organism, its strengthening. This is the effect of its use. Simmonds' Liver Regulator, whose regulation is founded firmly in the science of medicine, and whose ingredients consist of the most valuable and most nourishing food, is a most effective remedy for all ailments connected with the liver and stomach, and is a most valuable and most effective remedy for all ailments connected with the liver and stomach, and is a most valuable and most effective remedy for all ailments connected with the liver and stomach.

How's Your Liver?
Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmonds' Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficiency, NEVER BEING DISAPPOINTED.
An effectual remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., a remedy never discontinued in the effect produced. It seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the stomach and bowels.
