Astonishing Success.
It is the duty of every person who has used BOEHRER'S GERMAN SYRUP to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and not one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as this GERMAN SYRUP cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada.

A cure certainly cannot be effected from such powders, douches, and washes." OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

There are scarcely two locations that present exactly the same conditions for the construction of front ponds, and where the same plans could be carried out with equal success. Perhaps the best system economizing water and space, and which at the same time is the most convenient for changing the fish from one pond to another, is to build a series of four or six ponds. Make them entirely of wood. The plan I have adopted is to build them two abreast, and the others following in order. Each should be about twenty feet long, by twelve feet wide, and five feet deep. Unmatched hemlock lumber, an inch or one-half in thickness, is suitable for the purpose. The ground is measured and staked off in the desired dimensions. The excavation is made as for one pond, and stakes are driven at regular intervals, a few feet apart, around the excavation. If the bottom is made of lumber—which is necessary if the ground is porous—that should be first laid, extending should run across the bottom and be attached to the stakes around the sides of the ponds, upon which to lay the bottom. If the bottom is made of lumber, the pond can be kept cleaner and the water is always clear. After the bottom is laid, the sides should be enclosed with planks running lengthwise, and not straight up and down, for the reason that the wood between "wind and water" is always the first to decay. By placing the planks lengthwise, new ones can be substituted with but little expense, whereas if the boards are in a perpendicular position, it would necessitate an entire change of lumber.

A double partition extends through the centre of the excavation; the space between the sides should be about two feet in width and filled with earth. This strengthens the sides of the ponds and also affords a walk between them. The two sides are then partitioned off into compartments of equal width. The ponds on each side of the central division should have openings of about three feet in width between them, into which screens should be introduced so as to keep the fish separate, and yet allow the water to flow through. The screens should be so arranged that they can be readily removed, when it becomes desirable to give the fish the range of two or more ponds.

Horses at hard work need special care. Look in food and general treatment. They cannot do hard work on grass alone, and should have a proper ration of oats. An occasional washing, in addition to currying and brushing, will do much to keep the skin cool and dry. Use a coat sheet to keep off flies. Water frequently and they will not drink to excess. Clean and sweet stables promote the health of the animals—Cows often suffer from excessive heat while at pasture. Every pasture should have shade. If there are no trees, make a shelter; a roof set upon stakes, and thatched with brush, will answer a good purpose. If a cow is sunstruck while in full milk, if a amount of milk is greatly diminished, if not stopped altogether, and it rarely recovers. Show about the head, a good water and provided with shade; give it frequently.

—Young pigs require little beyond a clover pasture. Those intended for early market should have extra feed—Hens set after this month rarely succeed with their brood. The poultry house needs special care in hot weather to keep it clear of vermin. White-wash the sides and door, applying kerosene to the roosts, and provide dust boxes—Feed turkeys daily enough to induce them to return home regularly at night.

Good Results in Every Case.
D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs; had tried many remedies without benefit. Being induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, he did so and was entirely cured by use of a few bottles. Since which time he has used it in his family for all colds, coughs and whooping cough. He writes that he has had the best results. This is the experience of thousands whose lives have been saved by this Wonderful Discovery.

—Many persons have rough skins or cutaneous affections, which will not heal, because they are using soaps made of rancid fats, or containing an excess of alkali.
—For psoriasis apply cloths wrung out in very hot water until the inflammation and pain have subsided. For black and blue spots, an ounce of muriate of ammonia to a pint of lukewarm water makes a good application, to be kept constantly on.
