TIS THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

BY THOMAS MOORE, T to the last vone of summer Left blooming alone ; All her lovely companions

Are faded and gone; No flower of her kimired, Ko resebut, is nigh To reflect back her blushes, Or give sigh for aight

I'll not leave thee, thou lone one To pine on the stem; Since the lovely are sleeping, Go, sleep thou with them Thus kindly I scatter Thy leaves o'er the bed Where thy mates of the garden Lie sceniless and dead

So soon may I follow, When friendships decay, And from love's shining circle The geins drop away! When true hearts he withered. And fond ones are flown, O, who would inhabit This bleak world alone?

THOUGHT.

BY CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CHANCH. Thought is deeper than all speech ! Feeling deeper than all thought; Souls to souls can never teach What unto themselves was taught

Man by man was never seen: All our deep communing fails
To remove the shadowy screen Heart to heart was never known; We are columns left alone

We are spirits clad in vells:

Like stars that gem the sky, Far apart though seeming near,

In our light we scattered lie-All is thus but starlight here. What is social company But a babbling summer stream : What our wise philosophy

But the glancing of a dream? Only when the sun of love Only when we live above What the dim-eyed world bath taught

Only when our souls are fed By the fount which gave them birth, And by inspiration led Which they never drew from earth. We, like parted drops of rain, relling till they meet and yun,

Shall be all absorbed again,

LIL'S TRIUMPH.

I can remember the time," remarked Jack Granleigh, oracularly, "when a lawnfete at Oakland was no more than a lawnfete any place else. Now-"

"Now," laughs his pretty cousin, Lil Ferrars, "comes the 'presto-change' part. steadily. We are all in the wild scramble for invitaions. What havoe one man can make in sensible feminine community!" Edith Granleigh, Jack's beautiful blonde sister, indulges in a lazy, scornful smile. The several others collected on the balcony ance, although Gny waited a whole hour. discussing the coming lawn-fete join in a laugh. "I have the lovellest dress!" exclaims

Lil alone remains silent, admiring the roses that nod their white heads over the balcony trellis.

She is an orphan, dependent on the charty of her aunt, Mrs. Granleigh. The charity received is very slim, considering that but for Lil's small, capable fingers and ingenious brain, Mrs. Granleigh would have been under the expense of a dressmaker and nursery governess, and Mr. Granleigh would have been compelled to hire a regular stenographer in his office. " 'Lil, fair, fair, with golden hair,' where are your thoughts?" exclaims Jack at last. 'One more incomprehensible description cannot bewilder me much more. It is your turn now. What are you going to wear?"

Jack only came home from a medical college two weeks before, and thick-headed not yet defined the position Lil holds at Sunnyside—his father's beautiful home. .He knows that she is lovelier, sweeter,

She is really the sweetest creature—but proud, and worth ten such people as Edith Granleigh. I am really sorry she will not come."
