OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

A. Reprive for the Condemned.

Wretched men and women long condemned to suffer the tortures of dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous tremors and insomnia of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This budding hope blossoms into the fruition of certainty, if the Bitters is persisted in. It drives the torments of dyspepsia who seek its aid. Flatulence, heart-burn, sinking at the pit of the stomach between meals, nervous tremors and insomnia of which chronic indigestion is the parent, disappear with their baneful progenitor. Most beneficent of stomachics! who can wonder that in so many instances it awakens grateful eloquence in those who, benefited by it, speak voluntarily in its behalf. It requires a graphic pen to describe the torments of dyspepsia, but in many of the testimonials received by the proprietors of the Bitters, these are portrayed with vivid truthfulness. Constipation, biliousness, muscular debility, malaria, fevers and rheumatism are relieved by it.

Farm and Garden Notes.

"Water all animals before feeding meal and not after," recommends one authority. —Corn is the only crop that can be fed back on the farm, says a South Carolina farmer. —Many a farmer pays large sums for fertilizer, while he allows his own barnyard to run to waste. —Growing animals need more food in proportion to their weight than those that are full-grown. —An experienced poultry man says he seldom boils corn for poultry, but prefers to give it raw as the evening meal. —According to Prof. Riley, the best of all remedies for the apple-root louse is to drench the roots with boiling water. —Colonel John H. Stevens reminds improvident farmers that it is rust more than wear which ruins agricultural implements.

—In much of the ensilage fed to cattle here is enough development of alcohol to stimulate circulation and, possibly, to retard appetite for that kind of food. —You will save your horse the pain of a sore mouth if you will always dip the bit in a bucket of cold water before putting it in his mouth. This "takes the frost out" of the bit. —Gespools, hog walls and duck ponds in close proximity to wells are liable to pollute the water, and are numbered by physicians and observing people among the profane causes of sickness in rural districts. —Many sowing breeders regard a muslin cloth for the best for a pig pen. It is so high enough to be readily drained, so as to dry at all times. It is also customary with some breeders to remove from six to eight inches of these earth floors every spring, draining the manure-soaked earth in the fields, and renewing the floors with fresh earth. —The udder of a cow is a very complicated affair. Outwardly it consists of a series of muscular bands crossing each other and attached to abdominal muscles or the support at the base of the organ. The test is not a simple tube, as has been supposed, but consists of a large number of ducts, which run into four, five, or six channels or tubes, each of which discharges separately in the orifice of the teat. —One who professes to know practically whereof he speaks tells us that poultry or the table, to be at its best, should be fattened quickly. One of the best fattening properties, he adds, will be found in milk in almost any stage from sweet to clabber. It should be fed in connection with plenty of grain. Chickens should be fed plentifully before going upon the roost. —A horse should not be allowed to drink freely immediately after eating. Dr. John M. Russell, ex-Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Agriculture, tells of seeing some horses in France fed on coarse beans then watered all they would drink and immediately killed and dissected. He observed that a considerable quantity of beans had been washed down into the stomach, and some of them were found in the intestines. —Professor Sanborn, of the Missouri Agricultural College, declares that "corn fodder has a practical feeding value of two-thirds to three quarters that of good hay, and, more under favorable conditions. The fodder corn and hay wasted in the West is sufficient to double the stock now kept, at least that kept west of the Mississippi, and that of the ranches." The suggestion is worth heeding in all sections of the country. Most farmers are prone to undervalue the value of corn fodder. —A. L. Root, the well-known bee-keeper, has tried all known remedies for "foul brood," and thinks it would have been cheaper for him if he had burned up all his colonies in the first place and commenced anew. —To confine animals that have pasture and green food in summer and fall and feed them during the winter on dry food is not productive to the best results. If silage, turnips or some succulent food be provided the stock will prove more profitable and keep in better health than when fed on dry food exclusively. —The cause of apples falling off while in an immature state is the presence of the codling grub or larvae of the codling moth. This insect is becoming far more destructive to the apple crop in this country than even in Europe, of which it is supposed to be a native. The moths usually appear soon after the apple trees have blossomed in the spring, flying about the trees in the evening, and depositing their eggs one by one in the blossom end of the fruit. The eggs soon hatch and the grubs bore their way into the young apples, thus causing them to fall off. No practical means of preventing the attacks of this insect has yet been discovered, but if all wormy fruit is gathered up and fed to hogs or otherwise destroyed during the summer, the pest will rarely become so abundant as to cause all the fruit to drop off before maturing.
