How's Your Liver?

In the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged.

Every season of life has its appropriate duties. You can be decided without being offensive. A very necessary matrimonial hand—a

There is something wrong in the system when illness is burdened with wealth and industry who's families.

There is only one good—humor, happiness. No perfectly civilized man could be happy while there was an unhappy being in the universe that he knew.

There is something about money that dries up the affections. I suppose that one reason of it is that the moment a man gets any money there are so many things to get

It is said the same mysterious motive which impels a man to run two squares to catch a street car is equal to a minute ahead of the one behind it, impels a young man to court the first girl he falls in love with as if she were the only one in the world eligible to marriage.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough, Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you. Sold by Dr. Horn, Lehighton and Biery, Weissport.

A local paper at Clarendon, Ala., tells of two brothers who married two sisters and who live in the same house with their nine children. Of the thirteen persons present one uses coffee, tobacco, snuff or whisky, and the paper offers to bet that there is not another family of that much virtue in the State. Nor is it that the worst of it. No body has offered to take the bet.

In the Face of Death.

BY MISS E. H. HUGHES.

"I would cling to the man I loved, and be faithful to him, through evil report and good report—in the face of death itself!" Elaine Neel's was not a handsome face

"I have not committed myself to any such statement," replied Elaine, in a tone of mingled resentment and indignation, at having been betrayed into an unwelcome warmth of expression before her somewhat cynical sister, who, although she was a diamond

"Dear me, if you can command such an amount of eloquence on general principles you would really become positively heroic when it came to a particular instance!"

"The little sister of your bride elect seems to be quite an intense young lady. She has been so dense thus far that I did not know she had so much fire and spirit in her."

"You are in duty bound to think so at all events," remarked Clinton, with a laugh. "And after all, it takes all varieties to make up the sum of human life, you know; too much of one kind, however excellent, would be apt to become monotonous. But as we have both of our cigars, let us go over and ascertain your lady-love. Miss Elaine has evidently deserted for the night."

Henry Miller. He did not know that the girl whose name he uttered so lightly was the same person on her knees in her own room, her face, crimson with passion and shame, buried in the counterpane of her dainty bed, and sobbing shaking her slender form from head to foot.

Henry Campbell. A man as proud as it was ardent, was, however, her shield against any outward and unthought manifestation of her jealousy guarded secret; but the presence of that magic power in her heart unconsciously tempered her actions, her words, her whole demeanor, leading a graceful, womanly

And leave you helpless, exposed to such peril, with-out even an effort to save you? No! if this is death, we shall face it together."

There was a sharp report, a faint gurgling in the dog's throat, a few desperate throes, and then the huge creature lay lifeless at her feet.

"Then, as overcome by the revulsion of feeling, Elaine sank half fainting beside him, the head of footsteps and the hum of excited voices sounded near her, and the other members of the party who had heard the uproar crowded around her.
