Crash goes the National American Opera once more, floundering in the slough of despond. In two weeks organized as a cooperation association, it has sunk over four thousand dollars, and the members once more are starving. The papers all declared that the operas were magnificent, the singers beyond all praise, the scenery splendid, the ballot delicious and entrancing; but it would not do, the people did not come, the bex office did not show up, and the resu't was nix, or to be classic I might have said nihal.
