most massive masoury. In Carlisle, England, tall factory chimneys are being utilized as sewer ventilators with good results, twenty-nine now used. The velocity of the rising air has been measured by Surveyor Mekie, and it is found to be 1202 feet a minute in ordinary weather. The owners of the factories make no objection to this use of their chimneys, and the practice seems to meet with general approval. This snggests a plan that probably might be profitably employed in many cities in this country. With chimneys of ample proportions there would seem to be no serious trouble in using them to some extent as ventilators.
