Permicious Weeds.

The worst weeds may be divided into three classes: Annuals and plannials which are reproduced by seeds; perennials reproduced in the same manner, and plants which spread by offshoots or buds from the roots. Purslane, oxeye daisy, white weed, and ragweed are types of the first; wild carrot and parsnip are examples of the second, and those very troublesome weeds lanada thistle, quack grass, and stonecre are specimens of the third. The first class are easily destroyed by mowing or plowing inder before the seeds are formed; the econd class require plowing under as well as the prevention of seeding, and the third lass call for special treatment. It is quite easy to get rid of the first and econd kinds if the proper means are pr evered in, but very difficult to destroy th third kind, because not only the root pront again after plowing, but the stem: and as regards the most troublesome "ste erop" or "live-for-ever" (Sedum telephius ven the leaves will throw out roots an roduce new plants. Hence all plants bis class need thorough plowing under an the persistent destruction of every you prout that makes its appearance as so is it is seen. We have no fear of suc weeds after a successful experience with Canada thisties and quack grass, and would quite as soon have a dense gro vth of them to turn under as a liberal quantit of manure. Our plan has been to ploy he land in the summer, choosing a dry. hot time for the work, so as to turn the roots uppermost, when two days of ho sunning will kill every one of them and quite free the land of the pests. To de this is not difficult; it does not lose a crop because one can sow millet on the land and, if desired, turn this under as a rich ertilizer and sow wheat or rve and see with grass, putting in clover in the spring and thus begin a new life with the field.

Cooling and Drying the Cellar.

A great mistake is sometimes made in entilating cellars and milk houses. The bject of ventiliation is to keep the cellars ool and dry, but this object often falls of being accomplished by a common mistake and instead the cellar is made both warm and damp.
