DISEASES OF MEN ONLY

MEN YOU HEAR OF.

George Meredith is writing two new novels, turning to such in alternation. John Habington, author of "Helen's Pables," is a member of The New York Herald's editorial staff.

Sir Edwin Arnold, author of "The Light of Asia," never saw for his photograph till a month ago.

Joaquin Miller has been appointed by the governor of California a member of the state forestry commission.

It is said that one of the English novelists, the author of many books, is able to repeat from memory every word he has written.

Mr. B. P. Shillaker, better known as Mrs. Partington, is writing and compiling a book of personal reminiscences during fifty years.

An account of the English pension list recently compiled for the London Society of Authors shows that Tennyson forty-three years ago was enrolled on the list "in consideration of his eminence as a poet."

James L. Babcock, of Ann Harbor, the young man who must marry or lose a fortune, will spend the summer in Europe. While in Europe he will hunt up some of his fair correspondents on that side of the Atlantic.

The public income of the Prince of Wales last year, in addition to his parliamentary allowance of $200,000 a year from the consolidated fund, was further increased by $1,000 as Duke Cornwall and $1,750 as honorary colonel of the Tenth Hussars.

Hans Christian Andersen, according to Mr. Gosse, was a peculiar and decidedly unpleasant child. When he was pleased he played on his hat like a tambourine. When harsh words were said to him his tears and sobs came as readily and copiously as those of the immortal turtle in "Alice in Wonderland."

Edward Bulger Dickens, the youngest son of Charles Dickens, represents a New South Wales. Twenty-eight years ago his illustrious father said: "Nothing under heaven could induce me to offer myself as a parliamentary candidate for any place under the sun."

NOVELTIES IN JEWELS.
Hollow balls of flint and pale blue enamel alternating are a dainty conception in queen chain pendants.

A neat and inexpensive jewelry head is a Roman gold square set with diagonal lines of pearls and turquoises.

Topping a double pronged hairpin is a gold bar incrustated with diamonds and mounted by a star of small pearls.

Tortoise shell croquet needles, with incrustated gold tips, are a fascinating innovation and come in artistic lined cases.

A plain silver hand bracelet, with emeralds and rubies sunk into it alternately, constitutes one of fancy's latest frocks.

Bright gold hatchets, rimmed with small diamonds, constitute, just now, the most appropriate watch charms imaginable.

White enamel cuff buttons, oval in form and covered with slender gold-fine wires, have made their debut in the world of fashion.

A magnificent bronze plaque, inlaid with a representation of a fight between two crows, is a perfect example of artistic workmanship.

Among the latest eccentricities in oxidized silver is a match box that simulates an inch measure doubled into its smallest proportions.

A bar bracelet ornamentation of a phasing character is a diamond dragon by which is detachable and may also be made into a hairpin top.

Cute moustache brushes with chased gold backs coming in morocco cases that contain also oblong mirrors with etched silver backs, are very suitable birthday gifts.

In watch case ornamentation one that deserves mention is a sporting device composed of two diamond muskets, the tops of which are crossed above a ruby studded fox head.

An oddly constructed silver smoke set is designed to imitate stacks of bamboo canes resting upon a tray. It consists of a receptacle for matches, one for cigars, and another for ashtrays, varying in height, all on the same order.—Jewelers' Review.

SOME LITERARY WOMEN.
Mrs. Welch, the widow of Philip Welch, the humorist, will do literary and newspaper work.

Mrs. Cathel Hoy, the Irish novelist, now living in the Kensington quarter of London, is about sixty-five years of age, stout, and in her style thoroughly English.

The home of Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, the well known authoress, is at Deer Island, a delightful spot half way between Amesbury and Newburyport, Mass.

Rhoda Broughton, the English novelist, is a hard featured, highly intelligent looking woman of forty-eight, with a rare fund of humor of a racy and piquant kind.

Mrs. Edith Seestons Tupper is pictured as a tall, fine looking young woman, with intelligent eyes, clear skin and magnificent brown hair falling to the ground in thick, astringy tresses.

Oscar Wilde says of Amy Levy, daughter of the proprietor of The London Daily Telegraph, and author of the recent success, "The Romance of a Shop," "she is a mere girl, but a girl of genius."

Gertrude Franklin Atherton, author of the much-talked-of society novel, "Hermia Strydom," has gone to Paris to spend the summer with her sister, Mrs. Rathbone, wife of the American consul general.
