ry M. Stanley. "Did you ever hear how I found Stanley?" asked William J. Florence, the great comedian. Every one answered in the negative, and asked for a recital of the story. "Just after Stanley had crossed the Dark Continent," said Florence, "I was passing my vacation in Ea-rope. While in Paris I received a cablegram one day from the New York Her-ald, which read about as follows: "'Stanley has arrived at Marseille where we have cabled him. Give him a magnificent dinner in Paris the day after to-morrow. Spare no expense. You may draw against us for any amount. Please

"I went ahead and worked like a beaver. I engaged the Hotel Chatham, one of the best in Europe, for big receptions, and ordered a dinner for 250 guests. I skirmished around, and, thanks to the in tense popularity which the great African explorer had won, I had no trouble in getting together one of the most brillian and distinguished crowds that Paris could produce. I was very nervous, of course, about the matter, and spent the whole day preceding the night of the reception in supervising the floral and other decorations and arranging the distribution of the guests. In the afternoon, while hard at work fulminating in the choicest Americanese against an imbecile florist, I heard some one sing out: 'Hello, Bill, what are you up to?

"The voice had a half familiar ring. "I turned and saw a gray mustach individual with rather shabby clothes and the unmistakable expression of a New York newspaper man.

"'Hard at work getting up a dinner."

" *What is it all about-some political "'Oh, no; it's a complimentary banquet to Stanley.'
"'Well, I fancy he'll be delighted. He ought to be, any way."

"All the time I was puzzling myself as to whom my visitor was. I could not place him in my memory, and, therefore, resorted to the old expedient of asking

'What are you doing here?' I began. "Staying a day or two and then going nck to the States via London.'

"Anything important or newsy?"
"Absolutely nothing. Just going back to rest a little. You know, Bill, a fellow can't work forever without some relaxa

"'Yes; quite a number of years,'
"'What was the last place?' I queried, growing desperate. "'I don't remember, Bill, the exact place or time. It may have been New York, Chicago, Boston or Cincinnati I've seen you so often that I can't tell.' "I paused, not knowing what to say

"He promptly took up the conversa-"Say, Bill, I think I'd like to take in this dinner. Could you accommodate

"He smiled as he answered: 'Bill, I haven't got a card to my name; but never mind that-I'll come anyhow!" "This was too much for even me. I looked at him apologetically and said: 'My dear boy, I must make a confession. I have a fearfully bad memory for names and addresses, and although we're old friends I cannot recall who you are to save my soul from perdition. Now, who are you, anyhow? "He grinned all over, leaned forward, satching hold of my shoulders, and said: Bill, I knew you didn't know me all the time. I'm Stanley himself." "It took a minute to recover from the surprise and subsequent laughter, and then we made a bee line for the nearest Disarming an Unseen For.

"This was sometime a paradox," as Hamlet says. Tince, however, the people America and other lands have been enabled to pit Hostetter's Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whereever malaria evolves its misty venom to poison the air, and decaying unwholesome vegetation impregnates the water, there, in the very sionghold of miasma, is the auxiliary potent to disarm the foeand assure efficient protection. Feyer and ague, billious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenacionary they have fastened their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grasp and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is its preventive force that should chiefly reccomend the Bitters to persons dwelling in malaria-cursed loca'lties, for it is a certain buckler of defence against which the enemy is powerless. Cares, likewise, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and billious allments.
