Why won't these coyotes bark like other dogs?" I asked him, pointing to one I was trying to reclaim, "and why do they only howl and the paps grunt?" His answer was, "He won't learn." "Not learn?" said I. "What do you

"No," he replied, "not learn, for if he were of an honest breed he would bark, to try and imitate his master, or at all events the other dogs, but all barking proceeds from dogs imitating their mas-ter's shout. In fact, the dog imitates his master when he barks; he tries to speak, but cannot.

I give this curious observation as the only attempt I ever heard to account for the barking of our tame dogs. No wild breeds make any noise except howling and snarling, nor under the best eir cumstances will they learn to bark until the third or fourth generation, a length of trial which Mr. Byam does not appear to have given the coyote.

In the chapel on either side of the middle sisle sit the dignified seniors. while in other parts are the lower classes. Away up in his high pulpit sits "Prexy" (which is the cognomen that the honor able president goes by). After the service is over a most ancient and curious custom takes place, which is both interesting and amusing to the visitor. As he president leaves the chapel he passes down the middle aisle between the lines of standing seniors, who all bow very low at his passage. It is almost funny to see the men double up and bend almost to the ground, and it is hard to repress a smile. At the end gallery seats are reserved for spectators, and during "Prom." week, when these seats are filled with pretty girls, the point of general interest is generally that end of the chapel and not the other. Best Fodder for Cavalry Horse A series of experiments, made with a view of discovering the best fodder for French cavalry horses, has established the fact that straw and oats are, in reason, preferable to hay. It appeared that when the ration of hay was reduced, and that of the straw and cats proportionately increased, the staying power of the horses was much improved; they sweated less and bore fatigue better. These experiments have excited much interest in military circles, and it is very generally recognized that there is imperative need for a complete and careful study of the question of cavalry forage.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Bright Drammer

The drammer who cannot do his chare of bragging, and perhaps a little more, is as rare in the community as the black swan of antiquity. A Cold Day for a Funny Man. Talking about making people laugh

Lew Dockstader says: I remember I once sat up two nights to prepare a batch of new jokes and then sprung them on my audience. The house was packed with people. Not a smile, not a ripple. Finally I began to weaken. The cold chills were playing peek-a-boo up and down my spinal column. I was in a refrigerator. At last in desperation I walked to the middle of

"Ladies and gentlemen, I merely tell these things; I don't explain them." The remark caused a kind of a consumptive grin. Since that time I have told some of those jokes in every large city in the United States, and they have proved to be the best things I have ever had. The secret of how to raise a laugh is always in the kindergarten stage. No matter how hard a man tries he never seems to get beyond the A BC of it.-Ernest Jarrold in New York Journal.

TOILETS OF ANIMALS.

SAND BATHS AND WATER BATHS FOR BEASTS AND BIRDS.

Most of the Smaller Creatures Are More Particular with Their Appearance Than a Large Part of the Human Family. Methods of Some of the Birds.

Brushes and combs most animals carry with them. "Brilliantine" also is carried in a small and handy reservoir by all ducks and divers. Mud serves for cold cream and vaseline; dust for fuller's earth and pearl powder, and water, as with us, is perhaps the most important necessary. But birds especially are righty particular about the quality of their "toilet dust," and equally nice as to the water in which they prefer to vash. Some use water only, some water dust, others dust and no water. Parridges are a good example of the dusting birds, and are most careful in the selection of their dust baths. Dry loam mits them best.

But perhaps their favorite place is a seadow where a few turfs have been removed. There they scratch out the loam, and shuffle backward under the grass roots till their feathers are full of he cool earth. In wet weather they find, if possible, a heap of burnt ashes on the site of a weed fire, and dust there. Sparrows, on the contrary, always choose road dust, the dryest and finest possible. Larks also are fond of the coad, and dust there in the early morn ing. But they, too, have their fancy, and choose the dry, gritty part where he horses' hoofs tread.

Wild ducks, though feeding by the salt water, prefer to wash in fresh water pools, and will fly long distances inland o running brooks and ponds, where they preen and wash themselves in the early morning. But though passing so much time on the water, ducks seem to prefer a shower bath to any other; and n heavy rain they may be seen opening heir feathers and allowing the rain t soak in, after which they dress the whole surface with oil from the reservoir which we mentioned above. Swalowe and martins are as nice in their choice of bath water as any "professional beauty;" nothing but newly fallen rain water thoroughly pleases them, and if tempted to bathe, it is generally by some shallow pool in the road which ar SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, M.Y. nour's sun will evaporate.

A FALCON'S BATH, We have never seen hawks or falcons bathing when wild. Trained birds in good health bathe almost daily, and the bath of a peregrine falcon is a very care ful performance. But no nymph could be more jealous of a witness than these shy birds, and it is not until after many careful glances in every direction that the falcon descends from her block and wades into the shallow bath. Then, after more suspicious glances, she thrusts flings it on her back, at the same time raising the feathers and letting the drops horoughly sonk them.

After bathing head and back she spreads her wings and tail fan like on he water and rapidly opens and shuts them, after which she stoops down and splashes the drops in every direction. The bath over, she flies once more to the block, and turning her back to the sun, spreads every feather of the wing and tail, raises those on the body and assists the process of drying by a trem ulous motion imparted to every quill, looking more like an old cormorant on a buoy than a peregrine.

Cats, large and small, make the most careful toilet of any class of animal, with the exception of some of the opossums. The lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, India rubber like ball of the fore foot and the inner and passing it over the face and behind the ears.

CLEANLINESS OF A DOG. One of the most charming pets we have kept, and the most particular as to washing and brushing its feet and fur. was a lovely brown opessum from Tas-mania. "Sooty phalangist" was, we be-lieve, its scientific name. It was cov-ered with deep rich brown fur, had a face something like a fox, a pink nose, Sporting, dogs, which are used in mud, snow and wet, are atrangely clever and quick in cleaning and drying their coats, and it is a sure sign that a dog has been over tired if he shows any trace of mud or dirt next morning. Most of their toilet is done with the ongue, but they are very clever at usng a thick box bush or the side of mystack as a rough towel. One small spaniel which we allowed to live in the house who well aware that if he returned dirty he would not be admitted indoors. About an hour before the close of the day's shooting he used to strike work and begin to clean himself, and if urged to do more would slip off home and pro-sent himself neat and clean in the din ing room. One day the dog had been left at home, and his master returned and seated himself, wet and with half frozen drops of ice sticking to his gaiters, Pan ran up and carefully licked off the frozen ice and snow, stop ping every now and then to give an anx ous look, which said so plainly as possilete, "Dear me, if I don't get him clean quickly he will be sent to lie in the stable."-Spectator,

The number of children who have de cayed teeth, and in many cases a part of the first set gone and the second set badly broken down, is too great.

Owed Him an Arm. In the summer of 1877 Gen. Jubal A. Early was a guest at the Arlington hotel, Hot Springs, Ark. Among the other notables stopping there was the then somewhat famous ex-Governor Stearns, of Florida, who had been recently appointed by President Hayes a commis sion to adjust the cisims of citizens of Hot Springs who had improved real estate afterward decided to belong to the national government. One day the two gentlemen, who had no personal acquaintance, met in the hotel office. "Gen. Early," said Stearns politely, with me. You owe me an arm," and he indicated his empty sleeve. "How is that, governor?" queried Early, at the same time extending his "I lost that arm in the cause of the Union at Winchester, where you commanded the Confederate army."

'Indeed!' responded the general snavely, as he stroked his long gray beard and slightly straightened his bent figure. "You musta't blame me for that. I always instructed my men to do their duty, but sametimes the rescals would
