I found plenty of dry twigs and limbs handy, and with whittlings, a bit of cotton from she lining of my cap, powder from a cartridge and th flintlook of my musket, I sooh hild a good fire, and, spitting the bird with my ramrod, I did him to a turn and 16 membered it as a mre tid-bit.

The Moon and Fishing.

I have divided the success with which an angler may must into the best, medium, and poor, and have discovered a corresponding phase of the moon for each. These various phases, together with their degree of success, are as ollows :--

The best success will be met with or those days between the first quarter of the moon and four or five days after this

Medium success will be met with two or three days before the first quarter and that period of time intervening be-tween the four or five days following the first quarter and two or three days be fore the last quarter. Poor success will be met with from the two or three days preceding the first quarter.

Evidently there is a cycle, beginnin at or soon after the first quarter of the moon, when we have the best fishing, this passing into fair fishing, this into poor, then fair again, and finally getting back to the starting point. This cycle complex a period of about four weeks, in two weeks of which we have good, including the best fishing, and this is succeeded by two weeks of comparatively poor fishing. The fishes seem to increase in number from the new moon up to the first quar-ter; then they remain about stationery in number for four or five days and then begin to decrease, until they scom to be fewest two or three days provious the new moon.

A $30,000 FAN. AN INTERESTING HISTORY OF THE PALM LEAF AND ITS CHILDREN.

Maris Antoinethe's Waving Wondar-Th Oldert Chinese Fan in Existence--The Japanese General Directs the Movements of his Treeps with his, and Threez in in the Air as the figual for Attack. The origin of the fan is concealed in the dim beginnings of history. The Hebrews knew of the fam and used it not only to cool themselves, to winnow their corn. It is said that there is not a single early tombstone in Hindostan which is not decorated with the carvings of a fan, a fly brow and a parasol, three articles peculiarly the products of a torrid alimate. In India gradations in mak are indicated by the more or less luxuriance of these three, and from the simple pain eaf to the richest ivory and silk might he traced the ascent from pessent to prince. In Egypt the fan seems to have been an emblem of authority, for we see it on all representations of royal personages, where it is berns before the monarch. Monarch and fan seem to be separable.

Of course, China is held by many to be the original home of the fan, as it is of everything else. The Peruvians and Mexicans well understood the virtues of the fan and devoted considerable talent to its adornment.

The oldest Chinese fan in existence is preserved in one of the museums in Europe. It is made of bamboo leaf, prnamented with bulrushes. Later on the Chinese used silk with elaborate embroidery. In Japan the fan esems to be of equal antiquity. It is there a part of the national costume and seems to be a becomency adjunct to every coremony of Japanese life. The Japanese student takes his notes on it, the condemned oriminal goes to the block with a fan in his hand, the signal is given with a fan to the executioner, who holds the same article while dealing the fatal blow. With the Asiatics, as with the old

Egyptians, the fan seems to be associated with the idea of authority. The Japanese general directs the movements of his troops with the fan and throws it in the air as a signal for attack. Among the Japanese the fan was greatly im-proved in form and loving attention was given to its decoration.

It grew from a leaf of tail-like form through various changes to its present common quadrant shape. Bronze, ivory andal-wood, tortoise-shell, allver and gold have been applied to the manufact-ure of Japanese ribs ; paper, linen, silk and feathers have all been used as covering, while the Japanese imagination has run riot in fan decoration. To the Japanese is also attributed the nvention of the folding fan. These used in Egypt, India, China, Greece and Italy all appear to be made of feathers arranged in half divoles or in the form of a pheasant's tail, but all appear stiff and unchanged in form. But it is only in the Western world that the fan became an article of historical importance. In Europe it has play-ed no unimportant and no inconspicuous part in the affairs of men. It has been a veritable instrument of war, none the ess effective because used quietly in the unds of women. From the time of Cesar to the Cru

It is not too extravagant to may that 2-1-one year. svilization is in a way epitomized by the fan. On it were first recorded the legends of mythology, then among the Arablans and Christians the religious spirit finds expression, while later on

The last prominent appearance of the fan as a faotor in history was when the Dey of Algiers insulted the French Consul by touching or striking him on the check. This was immediately followed
