SOME ARTIFICIAL BEST

They are Hurd to Tell From Best I and the Best Are Stade to America. There is a gentleman in New York, has worn an artificial eye for many years without the knowledge of any member of his family. There are many men and women in public life wire wear artificial eyes undiscovered. To do this, of course, requires not only wonderful perfection in the main for a ure of the eye itself, but also great circumspection on the part of the wearer, whose vision is necessarily limited, not who is liable to exposure from the oc-currences of every lay life. There was until recently in New York city a lady, the wife of a well known man, who was in the habit of meeting very many persons, and who went out much in society who were an artificial eye without de-

Many artificial eyes are imported from Germany and France, where they are made almost as cleaply as bustons. In the district of Thuringia, in Germany. entire villages of men, women, an children assist in the manufacture. The rocess is analogous to glass blowing Indeed, it is a sort of glass blowing. T. vorkman sits at a table with a gan is flame from a blowpipe in front of his which gives an intense heat, capable of melting the glassy substance which forms the eye. He molds the substance s easily as a potter would mold clay. Then the pupil is put on by the same process, and the colors traced with mall needles of colored substance, a as to imitate the delicate tracery of the eveliall and pupil. When eyes are made at wholesale the orkman makes haphagard a vast quantity of sizes, shapes, and colors, and it is presumed that a dealer can, by keeping a large assortment of these artificial eyes, manage to match the eyes of any customer. But in practice his proves to be an exceedingly difficult matter. The colors and shapes of eyes vary in numberless variety, and where customers are fastidious and with keen vision for shades of color it is seliom possible to suit them with these ready made eyes, and they are little sed in first class establishments where perfect work is sought regardless of

The expression, "A bully boy with a glass eye," denotes a popular error that false eyes are made of glass. The fact that the substance is more like china. About 40 years ago an Englishman named T. J. Davis began to make articial eyes in New York by a new process. He found a spar in Connecticut which was peculiarly adapted for the naking of artificial eyes, and he main ained that, after great research in other paris of the world, no stone could be und capable of yielding the same re-This spar, to become ductile, ha to be suljected to an intense heat for from 36 to 48 hours. When thus treates is ready for shaping and coloring, am requires no metallic oxides to work it and is, therefore, not liable to injury from the saline secretions, and more durable and artistic than eyes made in the old way, which was to mix commo glass with metallic exides, producing naterial easily fusible by heat and very brittle. The eyes produced by the Con-necticut spar are tougher. Mr. Davi kept his secret for many years, and be-fore his death bequeathed it to his sons and they have made many eyes success fully for wealthy people who have trie in vain the best eye makers of Europe. The cheap wholesale eyes are ver-useful in sparsely settled localities of mall towns where people may wan artificial eyes in an emergency. For in stance, a gentleman traveling in the West broke his artificial eye, and to only place where he could get anothe was at a saddler's she p. He did not go a good match for size, shape, or color but he got something that served him until he could get to New York. ered in making a first class artificial eye The right is different from the left. The size of the bulb must be taken into ac count. The position must be prominent full, or sunken to mate the good eye

The shade of the white of the eye min be noted, and the delicate veins and tracery. Sometimes the blood hot as penrance of the good eye must be imtated. The diameter of the tris and the the operation on the diseased eye mus be taken into account. All this requir skill and dexterous manipulation. It is not unusual for a person to keep severa extra eyes on hand in case of accident extra eyes on hand in case of accident.
Sometimes people out of town semi orders for eyes in the same way that other merchandise is sent for. The European artificial eyes generally last about twelve months only, when they become rough and unpleasant. Even the best false eyes will after a time become rough and require to be replaced.
The less makers require that the false The best makers require that the false eyes shall be taken out at night and kept thoroughly clean. In most cases what is called an artificial eye is merely a part of an eye consisting of a small saucer which is not attached to the balof the eye, but placed in proper position over it, and kept in place by the eyelids.

Sometimes, when not skillfully flitted, they drop out and break.

A first class artificial eye, fitted in every respect in size, form, and color. costs from $25 to $50. The ready made coas from $25 to $50. The ready made eyes can be longlit for very much less. A well known maker of artificial eyes said to a Sun reporter: "I have $,000 imported eyes that are useless. They won't lit anything. My customers say they do not look like human eyes at all: that they are more like cat's eyes. They would prove uncomfortable to the would prove uncomfortable to the wearer and probably produce diseas. They would not fit the eyeball so as to move in unison with the good eye. They are very far, indeed, from the perfection of the eyes we make here. You can buy them for 40 cents apiecs. What is the need of any one buying such things when by waiting a day or a superfect fitting and well matched eye can things when by waiting a day or a: a perfect fitting and well matched eye can be made? It is a common thing for people to go abroad under the impression that the best artificial eyes are made there. But they generally come back with a better appreciation of American workmanship. Of course there are some persons who must mean the cheap eyes or none but no sensitive userson can be or none, but no sensitive person can be persuaded to use them unless in an emergency.—[New York Sun.

Mechanical Mamory. A singular instance of the old belief that what is too quickly learned can not endure was given me to-day by a popular young actor. Owing to the sudder liness of a brother actor, who did not have an under sudy, my friend had to prepare himself in a few hours for a part which was long and difficult, but the actor learned it after a few readings and played it with accuracy. Immediately after the performance he forgot almost every word of it. He was unable to repeat two consecutive sentences

It was toward the end of the eightsenth century when a successful tempt was made by one Dwight, of Fulham, to produce the like articles in Englan l. This was, however, a period o remarkable activity among English potters. The picturesque, though rude, puzzle jugs and tygs had been the product of much ingenuity; but they were disappearing before the beautiful salt glaze ware, much of which has never seen excelled in perfection of form and sharpness of ornament, and which had attained to the highest degree of artistic quality before the advent of Josiah Wedgwood.

The stoneware however, properly so called was probably produced in numberless localities all over Germany and the Low Countries, where suitable clay and aptitude existed. But there are a few districts to which peculiar interest attaclies. There were seats of character-istic and often remarkable original styles. Among the most notable places was Siegburg, situated not far from Bonn, on a tributary of the Rhine There were produced the tall cylindrical cannettes in what was long known as Cologne ware, and other articles of a like kind in a white body, often unglased. but richly embo-sed with elaborate and finely chased figures and ornaments in Siegburg suffered severely during the wars of the seventeenth century, and the potters, despairing of being able to corry on their industry in peaceful se-curity, flually emigrated to other lands. All attempts to influence them to return to their ruined abodes and desolated town were unsuccessful; but about 40 years ago an enterprising and ingenious potter undertook to revive on the spot the old manufacture. With the aid of ancient molds, discovered in the neighborhood, he reproduced the ware of old types, following closely the old traditions. These revivals found a ready market, by the agency of unscrupulous dealers, as veritable examples, and long of the rainbow; some with their hair held unchanged their places in public museums and the cabinets of collectors a- genuine examples of the much prized

These latter were generally of a rich bronze brown, covered with a brilliant salt glaze, Besides the familiar beer pots, ewers, and jugs of great artistic pretentions were there produced. The decorative art of Raeren found employment in the production of religious and mythological drinking and dancing scenes, some adapted from the engravings of the time, others undoubtedly the reation of local modellers and displayng great original talent.

Similar in style and color to the ware of Raeren were the productions o Frechen, among which may be included a well known jug, the neck of which is adorned with a grotesque long bearded face, called in England "Gray Beard," or sometimes known as "Bellarmine."

The Kannenbacherland of to-day comprises nine busy little villages, of which the two most populous, Hohr and Grenzhausen, give a common title to the whole district. Hour has the air of a small but flourishing town of between 2,000 and 8,000 population. Grenzhausen, about one-fourth less in population than Hohr, is like unto it in general characteristics. Chemical utensils and drain pipes are among the special goods manafactured; but Grenzhausen is presmi nently the home of the Kappenbacher, the maker of the cups and mugs which are the joy of the South German beer drinker. to-day came to be constructed. It is noticeable that the ancient art of the "thrower," the potter of antiquity, is largely practiced here, though many of the objects are pressed from plaster molds. Women are employed to at-tach the handles and snouts, and to finish the ware after it has left the thrower. Upon the women, too, dein the clay such patterns of flowers and arabesques as form a rough decoration on the surface. Models of patterns are rarely used. The women trace their designs with great freedom of hand. These devices in "sorstching" are subsequently relieved by broad touches of color, the cobalt used being mixed with
